From the Editors

THERE USED TO BE a phenomenon that sports photographers called "Kodak courage". It was applied to thrill seekers who stretched that extra yard, leapt a deeper chasm or climbed a steeper rock face than they would have done had they not had a camera lens trained on their every move.

Bear Grylls has lived out most of his adult life with a TV camera crew in tow. Thanks to them, we know he likes to live life on the edge – literally so, as anyone who last year saw him showing Louis Theroux around the precipitous cliff paths that surround his Welsh island home. Having watched nearly 20 years of Grylls doing whatever it takes to survive in the wild, it seems every bit of derring-do has been captured on film.

Of course, it takes a different sort of daring to explore your family history on television, as Bear does this week on Who Do You Think You Are? Who knows what skeletons will tumble out of the cupboard, what forgotten tragedies will induce unwanted tears, what embarrassments lie in the archives? It would have been completely understandable had such considerations been behind Grylls' total refusal to take part in the programme before.

What convinced him to change his mind? Apparently his mother's desire to discover whether the family had a royal connection buried in the past. Did he discover something to induce a glow of maternal pride? Read our interview on page 14 to discover more.

Andrew Marr has displayed another sort of courage altogether in mounting a recovery from a catastrophic stroke that threatened to finish his career – and his life. Ten years on he's now working harder than ever as a broadcaster, with a schedule that would exhaust someone half his age. Read about his recovery and his views on life after the BBC in another exclusive interview on page 20.

HIGH-STAKES DRAMA

NORDIC NOIR TO WITCHES' BREW

After bringing a taste of Nordic noir to ITV for three series of Marcella, Swedish screenwriter and The Bridge creator Hans Rosenfeldt is adapting The Burning Girls – CJ Tudor's bestselling psychological thriller – into a six-part drama for Paramount+.

"After 13 years of crime shows, it was really fun for me to be able to do something still dark and a bit horrifying and a little bit brutal, but completely different," he tells RT.

Samantha Morton stars as Reverend Jack Brooks, who moves to the sleepy village of Chapel Croft with her teenage daughter Flo (Bridgerton's Ruby Stokes) in the hope of leaving past traumas behind. But, once there, they learn about its dark history of disappearing children and sticking martyrs on fiery stakes.

Academy Award nominee Morton was "very invested" in the part, Rosenfeldt says, to the extent that she asked for the script's humour to be toned down. "She was a little bit more serious than perhaps we thought it would be from the beginning," he says. "The character was a little bit more light-hearted, but then Samantha said, 'This and that has happened. I don't think it's the place for this.'

"When we saw the results, she was right. She brought a lot from her own life into it, she could recognise certain things in her own life and she said, 'I reacted like this.' She was really invested in the show from the very, very start." LAUREN MORRIS

The Burning Girls will stream on Paramount+ later this year

You don't know anything."

A NEW TASK FOR ROSE

Writer/star of BBC3 romcom Starstruck Rose Matafeo (below) has the daunting task of stepping into Greg Davies's shoes as Channel 4 launches Junior Taskmaster. Second-placed in series nine of the regular show, she'll no doubt be out to settle a few scores – as will Mike Wozniak, who was runner-up in series 11 and now assumes "little" Alex Horne's sidekick role.

WHO WILL WIN?

There's a bittersweet air to this year's National Television Awards longlist of nominations, with both the late Paul O'Grady and Dame Deborah James in line for potential posthumous awards in the factual category. And there's drama in the new TV interview category, as Amelia Dimoldenberg, star of Chicken Shop Date and recent host of the BBC's backstage Baftas coverage, takes on three of TV's big guns: Graham Norton, Jonathan Ross and Louis Theroux. But who will triumph? We'll find out this September when Joel Dommett (right) hosts the ceremony. See the longlist and how to vote at radiotimes.com/ntas-longlist ROBIN PARKER

BUCCANEER TV; GETTY

After blockbusters like Mission: Impossible, The Greatest Showman and Dune, Swedish actress Rebecca Ferguson is back on the small screen with Apple TV+ sci-fi thriller series Silo. Co-starring alongside David Oyelowo and Harriet Walter, she plays Juliette, one of a group of people living in a community deep underground in a post-apocalyptic world. It's yet another all-action role for the 39-year-old Ferguson. No wonder Tom Cruise loves her...

You're known for big-budget movies – did making a TV show mean rethinking everything?

It was different. I remember walking onto the set thinking, "I'm doing TV for the first time." And then I remembered, "No, I've done TV!" – I did The White Queen at the beginning of my career. To be honest, the sets on Silo were bigger than most of the films I have done.

What appealed to you about a sci-fi show with a dark twist?

I mean, it was definitely a page-turner. I love the story that we've somehow fed up this world and why we're living where we are, and how would the mindset be after 200-something years inside a confined environment.

You're an executive producer on the show, too. What exactly does that mean?

When Graham Yost [the Silo showrunner] and Apple offered it, I was actually googling on my phone – without them knowing – what exactly an executive producer does because I had no idea! All I wanted was to be a part of the creative aspect, to be a part of a writers' room and be invited in.

How does it feel at nearly 40 to be finally calling the shots?

I have been on set a couple of times where it's been horrible, right? And in those situations – I'm choosing my words carefully – I didn't feel that I had the power or the voice or know-how to use it. Even now when I walk onto a set, and I sense this feeling... I have to go to my own therapist and go, "Why is this person affecting me so much? Is it me? Is it him? Is it her? What is it?" And today, approaching 40, I still battle with being around certain energies.

What sci-fi shows freaked you out as a child?

Literally none. My mum showed me the Marx Brothers, The Elephant Man, Cracker, Swedish TV shows, Midsomer Murders... My mother was an English countrywoman. And that was my inheritance. Science fiction wasn't the focus for her education, so it wouldn't have been the focus for mine.

Your mother worked with Abba, translating songs. Did you ever want to be a pop star?

She never forced her own background onto me. But I went to music school. Singing was my life, and I played piano. I hated acting at the beginning – I didn't like having the attention. But then I tried it out again and they said, "We really want you to do this part."

GETTY; ALLSTAR

ALL ACTION
With Tom Cruise in Mission: Impossible: Rogue Nation

You've got more sci-fi coming up – what can we expect from Dune: Part Two later this year?

It's phenomenal. Some films we make, we're proud and we move on. But this one somehow just stayed with me – the footage, the imagery, the characters, the grotesqueness of it, the beauty. I'm so excited for everyone to see it. Dune was great – I think Part Two is going to be better.

Before that, you're reprising your character Ilsa Faust for Mission Impossible: Dead Reckoning Part One, which is coming in July. Was it a tough shoot?

It always is. Literally, from day one, I said, "It's like giving birth... it hurts!" But once you've done it, you kind of want to do it again. And it's such a different way of filming, the way that Tom [Cruise] and McQ [director Christopher McQuarrie] work. And not working that way now makes me miss it. We don't have the scripts... You're not really preparing for a role. You know your role. You wing it when you're there. And you just make it work. And they just hit it out of the ballpark every time.

What's Tom like to work with?

I remember the first time I worked with him [on 2015's Rogue Nation], I got a beautiful gift from him. He wrote a note that said, "Thank you for taking this first leap with me." It was the first shot of the first day. Because he knew that I was nervous.

How do you know you've nailed it?

When I act in a scene, if it's a good scene and it's well directed, and I'm working alongside someone who's good, I step outside of my own being, and the scene gets to live its own life, right? That's what we're working towards.

WHAT IT'S LIKE TO...

write a classic Disney score

Eight-time Oscar-winner Alan Menken is responsible for the soundtrack to many people's childhoods, writing the music for Beauty and the Beast, Aladdin, Pocahontas and The Little Mermaid, as well as musicals Little Shop of Horrors, Newsies and Sister Act. Now, Menken has collaborated with Hamilton's Lin-Manuel Miranda (both pictured, right) for the live-action remake of The Little Mermaid, re-imagining his own tunes.

I WALK THE LINE

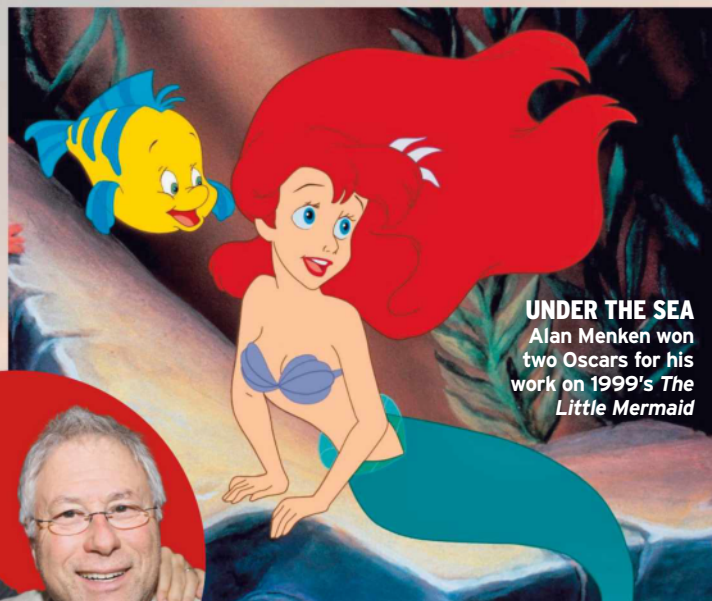

For live-action movies, I let the director call the shots on their vision for an adaptation. The huge upside is it's going to reach a new audience and it'll be a nice pay day, but it's also work. I want to hang on to the most important original elements, but I want to give it a freshness. There are moments where I'm torn between the two, but I'm pretty good at walking that line.

A BOY CALLED LIN

I knew of Lin-Manuel Miranda when he was a child, because he went to the same school as my niece, and I'd always hear about this enthusiastic, passionate, brilliant boy. Now, he's making a huge impact in the world. We wrote four new songs for The Little Mermaid – three of them are in the movie. Both of us knew we had a bit of work to go through to blend ourselves with the other's world. He's really smart and knows how to use contemporary hip-hop and rap elements in the context of something that's very classical.

COOKING UP CLASSICS

Collaboration is like putting flavours together in a recipe. With Lin, it was so much fun, but we're not going to be writing partners over a long period of

UNDER THE SEA
Alan Menken won two Oscars for his work on 1999's The Little Mermaid time as he loves to work on his own and

I like to work with a diverse group of lyricists. The work I did with Howard Ashman is different from the work I did with Tim Rice, which is different from the work I did with David Zippel, Stephen Schwartz or Glenn Slater.

SPEAKING MY LANGUAGE

I think of musical styles as a vocabulary. There are musical elements that can speak volumes about what you want in a scene, and what you want people to interpret a character thinking or feeling. I like to have an overall genre for a score and, within that, sub-genres that contribute to it.

If I can't find a really smart musical approach, I think maybe it's not something I should write a score to. For example, I wasn't going to do Sister Act until I could figure it out. I wanted it to be 70s musical styles, disco and psychedelic soul.

I'M A PROUD RECIPIENT (OF A REGOT)

Getting an Egot [winning Emmy, Grammy, Oscar and Tony awards, which Menken achieved in 2020] is just an accident. Someone invented the idea of it. I also have a Razzie Award [a parody show honouring the worst cinematic "failures"] from 1993 for worst original song for High Times, Hard Times for the Newsies movie, so I often say I've got a Regot – yay!

VIEWPOINT

NUCLEAR

A new drama shows the very real dangers of atomic power, says Jonathan Porritt

IF YOU JUDGE the prospects for nuclear power in the UK primarily by column inches and politicians' speeches, we're on the cusp of the most amazing nuclear renaissance for decades.

French power company EDF's socking great nuclear power station at Hinkley Point in Somerset would appear to be about to come online (in reality, that won't now happen until 2027 at the earliest, at least five years late and now costing an astonishing £23 billion), with another one of similar scale at Sizewell in Suffolk waiting for final approval, and an "incredibly exciting" fleet of next-generation Small Modular Reactors in the pipeline – a pipeline that stretches almost indefinitely into the future.

So spare a thought for today's army of nuclear cheerleaders as they anticipate the launch of Netflix's The Days. The eight-part drama is based on real events in 2011 when a tsunami overwhelmed Japan's Fukushima Daiichi nuclear plant, leading to the meltdown of three nuclear reactors. The disaster released high levels of nuclear material and 160,000 people in Fukushima prefecture were evacuated. The drama will inevitably cause problems for EDF's PR department, which goes to great lengths to keep bad news stories out of the media.

The same thing happened when Sky's

WAKE UP CALL
The Fukushima earthquake showed the dire consequences of a nuclear accident award-winning Chernobyl highlighted the inevitability of human error in managing potentially lethal nuclear technologies. Sod's Law has a way of messing up our best-laid aspirations – and as today's fleet of existing reactors continues to age, the likelihood of operational failures rises.

THERE ARE OTHER reasons why I'm convinced that nuclear power will have little part to play in tomorrow's low-carbon energy world. First, the costs of nuclear power continue to rise year on year, even as the costs of renewables (in particular, wind and solar, combined with new storage technologies) continue to fall year on year. If Sizewell C goes ahead, consumers will end up paying a hefty annual levy to help cover the costs of its construction – estimated by the University of Greenwich to be £43.8 billion – long before it generates a single electron.

Then security. Events at the vast Zaporizhzhia nuclear plant in Ukraine have caused politicians across Europe to rethink nuclear security. And even if the risks of a physical assault are remote, the possibility of cyber attacks is not. The emergence of powerful AI software (capable of lethal abuse in the hands of bad actors) has opened a whole new set of security concerns.

Lastly, there's the whole question of decommissioning nuclear reactors and storing the significant volumes of nuclear waste that remain at the end of their operating life (storage must be safe and under observation for thousands of years). It can take 30 years to decommission a single nuclear power station and, according to the UK parliament, decommissioning the UK's seven ageing power stations will cost £23.5 billion. The nuclear balance sheet is heavily weighed down by unacceptably high costs and liabilities. Worse yet, our government's obsession with nuclear power means that its support for a non-nuclear low-carbon future (provided by renewables plus storage, underpinned by massive investments in energy efficiency and a reconfigured grid) remains half-hearted – at best.

If we persevere with these nuclear fantasies, despite what the evidence keeps on telling us, and ignore the dangers that TV dramas like The Days can so vividly bring to life, I fear we'll never meet our targets for reducing emissions of greenhouse gases. And that, ironically, makes nuclear power one of the biggest threats to long-term climate stability that we're up against today.

Jonathan Porritt is the founder director of Forum for the Future. Netflix drama The Days about the Fukushima explosion is available from 1 June. The radio drama documentary Fukushima is on Wednesday 11.30am World Service

Jane Garvey ON THE BOX

THAT'S ENOUGH LA DOLCE VITA!

Italy must be overwhelmed with British TV crews – aren't there other destinations?

CLIVE MYRIE is at such a sweet spot in his BBC career that, as he told Radio Times a few weeks ago, he's now simply asked what he'd like to do, and the corporation promptly delivers. You like Italy, you say? How wonderful! Here's a cheeky Fiat 500 in a bright colour – have 15 episodes and go all over the place! And so we have Clive Myrie's Italian Road Trip (iPlayer), in which he takes us to the heart of a not very distant land, a place that hasn't been fully explored by doe-eyed Brits since the last time we sent a film crew there. About a week ago. When will we reach peak Italia on the telly?

Look, I love the place myself. There are times when I get quite misty-eyed about that wild boar sausage risotto I had four years ago – but let's leave it in peace for a month or two, for

'You like Italy, Clive?
How wonderful – have 15 episodes!'

decency's sake. We're embarrassing ourselves. Come on, Britain, play hard to get! Unless there are Italian TV crews roaming all over the British Isles glorying in our culture? Scoffing a steak bake on a windswept high street, or marvelling at a game of crown green bowls? I suspect they just cover our state occasions and make a bolt for the exit. Can't say I blame them.

I watched Clive's Verona episode and probably put on half a stone just gawping at it. I imagine clichés are high in calories. Glorious winding roads, lemon groves, opera, people who live long lives on the strength of good genes and the right diet. All present and correct. Clive inexplicably entered the Tiramisu World Cup, and failed to shine. Even with expert assistance, he produced something that looked like a cowpat. The event attracted a crowd, which makes you wonder what daytime telly in Italy is like if watching strangers knock up a pud in a tent is worth your time.

Next Clive hopped onto a Juliet balcony and spouted some Shakespearean verse at his old mate Andrea, who runs his favourite hotel. All very cosy. "Bellissimo!" bellowed Clive. I think that's Italian for "Nice work if you can get it". Did I learn anything new? No. Except that the BBC will do anything to keep some talent happy. Come on, take me somewhere – anywhere! – different. Germany, for example. Not far away and quite fascinating.

THE BEST – and most adventurous – travel documentaries can often be found lurking on Channel 5 and My5. Michael Palin's trips to Iraq and North Korea are well worth a look, while Alexander Armstrong has made films in South Korea. He's a TV traveller in the Palin mode: affable Brit transported to a dizzying, synthetic world he can't quite get a handle on. Most people he meets are decades younger – charming and proud to be playing a part in growing the world's tenth largest economy. He tries to bond with a successful Mukbang YouTuber who somehow makes her living eating vats of spicy noodles at speed.

He chats to a charming lad called Korean Billy who can do a range of British accents. They meet in a café in Seoul that's dedicated to the theme of poo, and where beverages are served in toilet-shaped mugs. It's all a long way from Verona. There are more surprising turns, though, notably when he's forced to confront his own mortality by hopping – briefly – into a coffin. This might sound ludicrous, but it's rather moving.

After her star turn at Eurovision, the majestic Hannah Waddingham will be offered every presenting gig in town, and good luck to her. More women fronting travel docs would be a very good thing. But I note with alarm she's a gifted linguist. And guess what? She speaks fluent Italian. Crispin in commissioning – don't you dare!

'I don't hide emotion or tears'

When TV adventurer Bear Grylls reluctantly agreed to trace his roots he uncovered family tragedy, beheadings – and a royal surprise

INTERVIEW BY ROSIE MILLARD

THE FIRST TIME I encountered Bear Grylls was several years ago at a Scouting jamboree in a Swedish field in the pouring rain. We were both drenched, but Grylls, who climbed Mount Everest aged 23, doesn't do bad weather. He does, however, do good manners. He took one look at me and turned to his team. "Would you get this woman a cup of tea?"

Now that he's found out all about his family, thanks to Who Do You Think You Are?, he realises being thoughtful is simply in his genes. "You must honour and respect people just because they are people – as good people as you are," writes his maternal great-grandfather, the Reverend Lionel Ford, in a speech he gave about none other than the Scouts. Described as "a genial and kindly man", Reverend Ford was a vicar and father to seven children, but also headmaster of Harrow School from 1910-1925. His speeches praising the Scouting movement and its values of kindness and courtesy were given in 1913, only a few years after its foundation by Lord Baden-Powell.

For Bear Grylls, committed Christian and champion of the Church of England's evangelical Alpha course as well as Chief Scout since 2009, the discovery that his great-grandfather was not only a vicar but also an early adopter of the Scout movement is more than significant. He takes a quasi-religious meaning from it. "It's no accident – things are meant to be – these are coincidences we have through all our lives. This show really reinforced to me that death is not the end – we are all so connected – I feel Lionel and his son Neville, my grandfather, never left my side. They have been cheering me on throughout my journey with Scouting. Providing a guiding, quiet hand. I look back now and think – of course. Death is not the end."

Well, it's a decent result for someone who frankly never wanted to do the programme in the first place. Grylls confesses he's had the call from the Who Do You Think You Are? team every year now for more than a decade, but has always turned it down.

"I just didn't want to do it. I don't like doing TV and I didn't have an aspiration to do the show. But my mother has always really wanted me to do it, because she had hoped we were related to someone royal. She's now 82 and my sister took me to one side and said, 'Mate, you have to do it. Forget about the TV side of it.'"

I confess to him I find it hard to believe Grylls doesn't like being on TV. He's barely off our screens! "I struggle with it," he insists. But he's so good at it, I tell him... he recently visited President Zelensky in Kyiv – getting him onside with Dairy Milk – camped with Barack Obama and > ◀ got Gareth Southgate to abseil down a cliff.

"You can be good at something and still struggle. I used to get annoyed about the fact that I found it difficult, but now I believe a sort of natural tension is quite good. People who love being on TV or on stage are a bit of a bore, I think. It should be difficult and awkward, and then people are engaged. And if doing TV is the price I have to pay for doing what I love, running wild in nature, I'll do it. Struggle is interesting anyway, and good. It's where we build strength and resilience."

GOING THROUGH THE experiences of his forebears is a struggle of a different nature, however – even for this man of action who spent three years in the SAS. One difficult moment is when he begins to understand how his great-grandfather the Reverend Ford coped with the death of his 16-year-old son Richard from septic pneumonia. When Grylls visits the headmaster's house at Harrow and reads the account, this modern emblem of manly fortitude is moved to tears. Not that it bothers him.

"I don't try to hide emotion, or tears. And I found that bit really moving, sitting in that room where grief had been so raw and real, and starting to understand. My grandfather, Neville Ford, Richard's brother, was a big, bear-hug of a man but he was always a little broken in his life. I wish I had spoken to him more, held his hand a little more. That pain went with him all his life. That sibling bond, it never leaves you."

By contrast, his paternal grandfather, Colonel William EH 'Ted' Grylls, was a formal, buttoned-up man, an officer in the King's Royal

'I love to wear a kilt when I go out with the dogs'

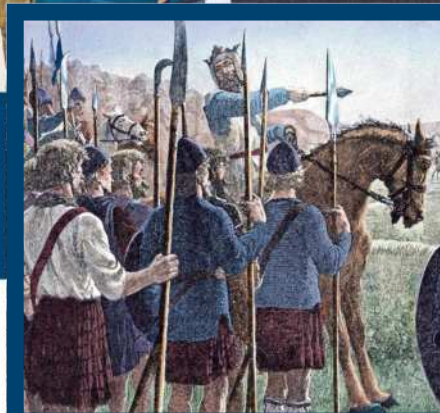

Hussars who never spoke to his family about his work during the Second World War, yet who was awarded OBE in 1945 for his work as a technical advisor in the Army.

In 1947, just after the end of the War, he was made a Commander within 'T Force', a top secret American/British elite unit. Their task was to interview key German individuals and glean intelligence from them about top secret military secrets and advanced technology, for Allied use against the Soviet threat. Commander Grylls was in charge of identifying hundreds of German engineers, scientists and businessmen, and sending many of them to the UK for interrogation.

"That generation," says Grylls in wonder. "Thank goodness there were so many brave people like Grandpa Ted, willing to make difficult decisions. Were they all perfect? Probably not. He was kidnapping Nazis who probably should have stood trial for war crimes, but there was a bigger enemy in the Soviets. You do it and you trust your moral courage. That's what courage is. And it was about duty. It's quiet and difficult but you trust your heart and try and do the right thing."

All of which is valid and important and perfectly in the Who Do You Think You Are? canon. It seems, however, that the production team was keen for Grylls to take part because they knew about something else, something huge. Was it something that would make his mother very happy? Indeed it was.

Grylls is not only related to someone aristocratic, but someone royal, specifically a royal who loved spending time in the great outdoors almost as much as the Chief Scout does. And someone from Scotland, which was the first great thing. "Well, I have always loved Braveheart," says Grylls. "And I have always loved Scotland. It's where I met my wife Shara. As soon as I was told we were going to Scotland, I thought that was awesome because it's where my heart has always been."

It transpires that through his mother's family, the adventurer is related to Archibald Campbell, First Marquess of Argyll, who was beheaded in 1661 for his support of Oliver Cromwell and resistance to religious changes originally brought in by Charles I. The Marquess was unrepentant and therefore came to a sticky end via Scotland's equivalent of the guillotine, the "Scottish Maiden". But that's not all. Grylls then learns he's descended from Robert the Bruce – the Scottish monarch who was inspired by a spider – who fought Edward II at Bannockburn and who, in the words of Flower of Scotland, the lusty Scottish rugby anthem, "sent him homewards, tae think again". King Robert is, basically, a Bear-style of king. "He was a clansman who rewrote the rules of conventional soldiering. He was an inspirational leader who spent time in the great outdoors, he came back transformed and renewed. It was epic for me to follow that, and to understand a connecting spirit through our lives."

IN SUMMARY, GRYLLS is pretty happy about being grilled by the show. "My mum loves the royalty bit, but for me the experience was about being connected to maverick spirits who loved their families, and were dogged, who knew their faith and who were not ashamed of it. I have never apologised for championing those things and it's nice now to have a reason for it."

Even though it necessitated being in front of a dastardly TV camera? He laughs. "This show was made for me. All of it now makes sense, seeing people who took the road less trodden, who never gave up, people who valued Scouting, and family. It has given me a sense of connection through time. Who Do You Think You Are? is a magical creation because it's about understanding something bigger than ourselves."

And now he can even wear a kilt with righteous propriety. "I love wearing a kilt at home. My sons always laugh at me because I love to wear a kilt when I go out with the dogs." Worn as a true Scotsman? You betcha. Even before he knew he was one. "Everything feels free. I love to go running beside a riverbank near where we live, in bare feet and just a kilt and T-shirt, then I just strip off and dive in and it feels so good, and natural."

Blasts from the past

Sarah Williams's guide to the new series of Who Do You Think You Are?

KEVIN CLIFTON

Proud of his Grimsby roots, former Strictly dancer Kevin Clifton is also keen to investigate a family rumour that the Cliftons have an ancestor from the First Nations of Canada – his great-great-grandmother who left the country after a troubled childhood. Heading there to explore her story, Kevin follows a line of ancestors that leads back to Hudson Bay, the centre of the British Canadian fur trade, where he uncovers the truth behind the family rumour and a story of a strong woman surviving against all odds.

DEV GRIFFIN

The DJ worked on Radio 1 before moving over to Heart's Evening Show in 2021. Born in London to an Irish mother and Jamaican father, he hopes that learning more about his ancestry will strengthen his sense of identity. In Ireland he uncovers stories about his family and the struggle for independence; and in Jamaica he explores the lives of his great-grandparents.

EMILY ATTACK

Best known for her role as Charlotte in The Inbetweeners, Emily Attack has since starred in her own comedy series The Emily Attack Show. With Paul McCartney her first cousin, twice removed, she explores her grandad's life in showbiz, and a trip to Wrexham reveals a link to Ryan Reynolds.

CHRIS RAMSEY

The South Shields comedian is a regular face on TV. Chris feels he has had a charmed life and wants to know if his ancestors were as fortunate. He discovers that his great-grandfather survived the First World War and he explores the role his grandad Alf played in the Second. A story about an 18th-century hospital lottery confirms his family's luck goes way back.

CHRIS AND XAND VAN TULLEKEN

Twins Chris and Xand are both medical doctors and science broadcasters. Their TV appearances range from the children's series Operation Ouch on CBBC to BBC2's Trust Me, I'm a Doctor. Growing up in London, they have always been aware of their Dutch heritage, but want to separate fact from fiction. Are they descended from royalty and why does their family own a small silver shovel? Their journey follows in the footsteps of a sea captain and in The Hague, sheds light on a troubling past.

Sarah Williams is editor of Who Do You Think You Are? Magazine. Find out more at who.doyouthinkyouaremagazine.com

LESLEY MANVILLE

From gritty Mike Leigh films to The Crown, Lesley Manville has had a stellar acting career and wants to see if there are any dramatic stories in her family's past. In particular, she wants to find out why her mother's parents never married. She discovers an impoverished agricultural worker transported to Australia. A trip Down Under reveals a new start for him and new relatives for her.

CLAIRE FOY

Best known for playing the young Queen Elizabeth II in The Crown, Claire Foy is keen to delve into the real-life characters in her own ancestry. On her mother's side she uncovers a tragic accident, but it's her father's family that takes centre stage.

The scene is set for a 19th-century courtroom drama in Manchester with her Irish great-great-grandfather and his brother on trial for their lives. With the odds stacked against them, will they be able to prove their innocence?

ANDREW LLOYD WEBBER

In the first episode of the series Lord Lloyd Webber sets out to discover where his love of showbiz comes from. Investigating his mother's line takes him to the Battle of Waterloo and further back to Henry VIII's court, but it's his father's line that delivers what he's looking for. As well as uncovering a working-class hero with a love of architecture (a passion shared by Andrew), he comes across an 18th-century family of performers and musicians with fascinating parallels to his own life.

reason for moving to LBC after 22 years at the national broadcaster.

So, I ask, has he achieved this vocal recovery?

"I have now. It took a while. I spoke to my colleague Shelagh Fogarty, who moved from the BBC to LBC years ago, and I said, 'How do I move from a BBC voice to an LBC voice?' She said that every day in front of the microphone you peel off a bit of BBC and then another bit, then you might have peeled off too much, so you put a bit back on and eventually you get the balance right."

We are talking in what Marr's team, presently celebrating a 30 per cent rise in audience figures across the first year, calls the "soft play area" – two comfy armchairs either side of a table – in the corner of the studio at LBC's Westminster headquarters where, on early evenings from Monday to Thursday, Tonight with Andrew Marr analyses the day's news. These easy seats are used for lighter chats. Asked for an example of such vocal freedom in his new role, Marr, 63, nods towards the desk from where he hosts most of the show and remembers 5 July last year.

"I was live in that chair when Sajid Javid resigned [as health secretary] and I said, 'Boris Johnson's government is falling apart.' And then Rishi Sunak resigned [as chancellor] a minute later, and I said, 'That's it, it's all over!' I couldn't have done that at the BBC." In March this year, when Johnson appeared before the House of Commons privileges committee to defend charges of misleading MPs over lockdown parties in Downing Street, Marr recalls, with some relish, "I was able to give a semi-comic preview of what his defence might be, which turned out to be pretty accurate. And that, as they say, went viral. I certainly couldn't have done that at the BBC."

As the BBC's political editor (from 2000 to 2005) or presenter of BBC1's Sunday-morning political show (between 2005 and 2021), Marr would have been required by the corporation's editorial guidelines

INTERESTING TIMES

In an era of Johnson, Trump and Truss, Marr is happier not to be tied to BBC rules to include Downing Street reassurances that Johnson could survive the loss of key cabinet colleagues and hadn't known about the soirées in his house. "Look, I never wanted to be a ranter or shouter, particularly. But I did want to speak more clearly and go to the kernel of the issues. Take something like the Rwanda policy [on the deportation of asylum seekers], to which I am very opposed. At the BBC I would have to say, 'From the point of view of Suella Braverman or the Rwandan government...' etc. And, in the end, it just becomes wearisome. Over time, I was self-censoring on air, and then self-censoring in front of family and friends, and even not saying what I really thought in the pub with friends. I just thought, ‘This is absolutely insane, this isn’t why I came into journalism at all.’

Although the BBC rules have always existed, and voters have long complained of leaders’ loose relationship with truth, objective reporting has especially been tested by a run of politicians – Johnson, Trump, Truss – who seem to inhabit an alternative vocabulary and reality.

‘Absolutely. It’s a real problem. We live in a culture that is, rightly in many ways, very cautious about the words “lie” or “liar”. Because, once you start to throw them around, everything becomes degraded and people might turn their backs on the whole process. But where you have absolutely clear, obviously evident falsehoods – I’m thinking of [Johnson’s] claim during the European referendum that Turkey was about to join the EU – I wish I’d had the chance to call those out more clearly. And I can now.’

To what extent had Marr articulated his concerns within the BBC? ‘Almost not at all. I would have some conversations with the team of the Sunday show about what I could and couldn’t say on air.’

Did the BBC try to persuade him to stay?
‘No.’

Did that offend him?

‘No. I didn’t tell anyone until I’d already signed here.’

In contrast to, for example, Huw Edwards, who was by chance photographed entering the offices of LBC owners Global for a meeting but then sealed a new deal with the BBC? ‘You’re tempting me to be naughty. But, yes, that stuff does happen. Or someone saying, ‘Oh, goodness me, there’s a bottle of champagne from Rupert Murdoch just arrived!’ In my case, I’d decided to go. So I went.’

The BBC’s extreme caution in political reporting – imposed by a statutory requirement of ▷

TOO BIG TO FAIL
Marr believes Gary Lineker didn't need to be sanctioned by BBC bosses < “impartiality” and the fact that the government sets its funding through the licence fee – was severely tested recently when director-general Tim Davie first suspended Gary Lineker as host of Match of the Day, then reinstated him, after the football frontman tweeted comparing Home Secretary Suella Braverman’s language on refugees to that of 1930s Germany. The BBC has since commissioned an external report into presenters’ use of social media.

IF MARR WERE chairing the inquiry, what would he rule? “I’d conclude there are a small number of people who are genuinely speaking for the BBC – Huw Edwards, Nick Robinson, Laura Kuenssberg – who are at the heart of the BBC’s political offer. They have to be really, really careful about what they say and do. I get that. But to extend that level of scrutiny to sports presenters or actors – it’s ridiculous.”

His view reflects what is reported to be the consensus in BBC News: that only journalists should be muzzled. A counter-view, though, is that Lineker is paid £1.35million of licence fee each year – might his digital campaigning seem contemptuous of the percentage of the public who disagree with him on Brexit or refugees?

Marr pauses, thinks, then, stressing that, “I’m not a regular viewer of Match of the Day, if that’s what it’s called”, replies, “Lineker is a very difficult case, yes, because of his very, very high salary and profile. And he was clearly determined to have his say, come what may. And if you are Tim Davie, you can’t allow anyone to give the impression that they are bigger than [the DG], bigger than the organisation. So I think it became very personal between them. But, for me, the fundamental issue is that there is a very small cadre of political staff to whom restrictions should apply.”

Another consequence of the BBC remit of even-handedness followed the 9 March edition of BBC1’s Question Time, when a panellist described Stanley Johnson, father of Boris, as a

‘I’m pro-BBC. But it makes some very big mistakes’

“wife-beater”. Under editorial rules relating to claims against people not present to defend themselves, presenter Fiona Bruce intervened to say that Johnson senior characterised the incident described as “an isolated and regretted lapse”. On social media, however, Bruce was assumed to be minimising domestic violence and then resigned from a female-safety charity.

“I have great sympathy for Fiona,” says Marr. “It’s a horrible position to be in. With the benefit of hindsight, it’s generally better to show your workings. If she had said, ‘I am legally obliged to point out,’ it would have been very different. I think if you are ever in a position where what you say is going to offend a lot of people, then it’s better to explain why you are saying it.”

MARR AND I met by coincidence on a train from Scotland last August, when it was known that Queen Elizabeth II was unwell; Marr had previously recorded the latest (and likely final) version of the commentary on the main BBC1 obituary of the monarch. But when the film went out on 8 September, the voice heard was Kirsty Young’s.

“That was upsetting,” Marr admits. “I’d been making and remaking it for ten years or so, going in every few months. It was decided apparently in the BBC that it might ‘confuse or upset’ viewers if they heard my voice on it now I’d left the BBC, which seemed an odd argument.”

But wasn’t the BBC really saying, like God in the Old Testament: you are either for me or against me?

“Yes. That does appear to me the case.”

Even so, he stresses, “I’m pro-BBC. I think it’s a very important organisation. But it makes some very big mistakes.” We are speaking before BBC chair Richard Sharp’s resignation, after being found to have broken disclosure rules over dealings with Boris Johnson prior to the then PM’s appointment of Sharp. Marr is convinced the beleaguered chairman has to go. “That’s not personal; it would just be better for the BBC if he goes.”

Marr has made an inspirational recovery from the severe stroke that hospitalised him for two months a decade ago, which has left him with bodily and facial restrictions on the left side and requires him to wear a leg brace. When he decided to more than double his workload – LBC live four times a week, plus a Classic FM show and becoming political editor of the New Statesman – was there concern from those around him at the risk of putting himself under too much stress? “Yes! And what I said to them – my nearest and dearest – was, ‘I’m working twice as hard but having three times as much fun. So, by and large, the maths works.’”

PEOPLE DO WARN him about doing too much, but he insists that he fits his work into Monday to Thursday, then takes a three-day weekend of family, reading and painting. “By Thursday evening, I’m completely pooped, I’ve had it. There will be no books or TV documentaries until I’ve finished here.”

Most companies now circulate – as part of diversity monitoring – forms inviting employees to identify as living with a disability. Does Marr tick that box? “No one has ever given me such an option. But I would say I am disabled. I’m what’s called hemiplegic, which is that nothing much works on this side of my body. But I get around OK. I can talk. I try to walk – or stagger – five miles every day.”

With Scottish and EU referendums and five Conservative PMs in seven years – plus the Trump presidency in the US – it has been an astonishing period politically. Is it ever going to quieten down? “Not really. If the Conservatives manage to form the next government, Rishi Sunak will still find it hard to hold the Conservatives together. But, if Keir Starmer doesn’t win, it’s going to be mayhem on the left. I’m afraid it’s going to be quite a wild period ahead. The biggest issue at the moment that we’re not talking about enough – I’ve tried to do it on the programme – is artificial intelligence; the risk to jobs and of AI going out of control. That’s what we should be talking about more. That’s a good example of something journalism and politics decide is just too complicated to deal with.”

But the BBC could just program an AI presenter with opinions to exactly match the party percentages in opinion polls? “Absolutely. And they could make them look exactly as they think people want them to look. Maybe that’s the future.”

IS EQUITY RELEASE RIGHT FOR YOU?

Find out if you could boost your finances by unlocking tax-free cash from your home

With property prices rising steadily over the last decade, many homeowners are finding that their homes have become a valuable asset, but one that is difficult to access without selling or downsizing.

WHAT IS EQUITY RELEASE?

Equity release has become a popular way for homeowners aged 55 and over to access the wealth tied up in their homes to provide greater financial flexibility and stability in retirement, without the need to sell or downsize.

The money released is tax free and can be taken as a lump sum or in smaller instalments. You can choose whether to make repayments, as the money that you release – plus the interest that you accrue – is repaid when you die or go into long-term care and your property is sold. Also, some plans allow you to pay off a portion of the interest each month, meaning you can reduce the amount of debt that is being rolled up.

Once you've repaid your existing mortgage, you can choose how to spend the money, whether that's on home improvements, providing a gift to loved one or simply supplementing your day-to-day finances.

NO NEGATIVE EQUITY GUARANTEE

All equity release plans come with a no negative equity guarantee, which means that you can never pass on the debt to your estate, providing the property is sold for a reasonable amount. There are also plans that allow you to safeguard a percentage of your property value so that you can still pass on an inheritance to your loved ones.

GET ADVICE

We're pleased to be working with Age Partnership Plus, who are part of the UK's number one equity release adviser*, to offer an equity release service. Through our service, your dedicated adviser can provide you with a personalised illustration so you can understand the features and risks and find out how much you could release. They will help you understand if equity release could be right for you and they will tell you everything you need to know, including the effect on the amount of inheritance you can leave and if your entitlement to means-tested benefits could be affected now or in the future.

Your adviser will review a wide range of plans from the whole of the market to find the most suitable solution for your individual circumstances.

It's important to know that equity release may involve a home reversion plan or a lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property. Your quotation is free and you are under no obligation to proceed. Only if you choose to proceed and your case completes would a fee of £1,995 be payable.

Hollywood meets natural history
– Sir David Attenborough says dinosaurs are the future of TV

PREPARE TO BE astonished – again. The epic Apple TV+ dinosaur series Prehistoric Planet 2 is now available to watch and its wild ambition remains undimmed. Fuelled by wads of the streamers’ cash and packed with ultra-realistic representations of the Velociraptors, Triceratops and giant Pterosaurs that roamed Earth 66 million years ago, its makers – apparently undaunted by the barriers between art and science – have created another breathtaking visual world of long-gone deserts, rivers and frozen forests.

“It’s bonkers, isn’t it? So beautiful,” says Mike Gunton, co-producer of the series and creative director of the BBC’s Natural History Unit (NHU), about one ravishing scene where a line of Isisaurus walk through the lava fields of the fiery Deccan volcanic plateau, a landscape that is portrayed with shimmering beauty. “We are making a new sort of genre,” he says. “Time-travelling natural history.”

Together with a huge budget – Apple is keeping secret how much it cost to make – that ambition is facilitated by the expertise of the NHU and British CGI experts the Moving Picture Company (MPC). Previously responsible for the talking animals in the live-action versions of The Lion King and The Jungle Book, MPC is marshalled once more by Gunton’s co-producer, Hollywood director Jon Favreau. But at its heart remains the unending curiosity of Sir David Attenborough who, aged 97, is still excited by the possibilities of technology. “The extraordinary expertise that there is in Hollywood and the NHU enables you to get answers to questions,” Attenborough says, “but also, to propose questions which you never even thought of.”

It is Attenborough’s authoritative presence that signals we are in the long tradition of natural history programming, rather than an extension of the Jurassic Park franchise. For this is both very modern and very traditional television – the epitome, you might argue, of the now century-old Reithian BBC commitment to inform, educate and entertain. It just happens to be delivered by another broadcaster.

In that spirit, a suited but tieless Attenborough introduces each episode from a book-lined study littered with dinosaur fossils, setting up the scenes that will quickly take us from couch to Cretaceous. Then, in a coda after the action, he explains the science of what we have just been watching. “I think they [the codas] are very, very important,” says Attenborough.

‘Fifty years ago,
paleontology was concerned with putting labels on things’

SIR DAVID ATTENBOROUGH

“Otherwise you might think to yourself, ‘Did they just make that up?’ It shows it’s the last thing that they’re doing. There are more people working on dinosaurs now than there ever have been since they were first discovered. So there are a lot of people who know quite a lot more about the subject, who are willing to pounce on you if you haven’t got your facts right. It’s a very important element in my book that, after your minds have been blown by those wonders, you can say, ‘Yes, and we can prove that they’re true.’”

AN ELDERLY WHITE man with an RP accent telling us what to think is, arguably, against the spirit of the times but, as ever, Attenborough is utterly compelling. “He’s still the great voice,” says Gunton. “He looks and sounds 30 years younger. He’s so on it. He still loves performing, loves being in front of the camera. What I think he liked about doing those science explainers is, it’s almost going back to what he originally loved doing. Of course, he’s fantastic when the bears are running past him. But his absolute genius is saying, ‘Let me tell you how important, exciting and interesting this object is.’”

Ultimately, natural history – ancient or modern – is about sex and survival. Among the creatures Prehis-

FAMILY TIME
A Pectinodon
with its brood

toric Planet 2 welcomes back is Beelzebufo, a squat, previously vicious, amphibian now in the mood for love. The “devil toad” wins our sympathy when preparations are interrupted by a herd of towering Isisaurs taking a mud bath in his bedroom. In another scene, two giant Hatzegopteryx land on a beach to enact a fraught courtship display. “Fifty years ago, palaeontology was still concerned with putting labels on things, naming them. ‘Is it a new species?’ seemed to be the exciting question,” remembers Attenborough. “It’s not actually the exciting question any more. The exciting question is, how did they mate? How did they catch their food? How fast could they run? Were they aggressive?”

But how on earth can the film-makers know what troubled a Pterosaur, or the sexual ambitions of a devil toad? “If you spend your life watching animals, you can see when something does or doesn’t look right,” says Gunton. “Mother Nature creates these limited opportunities, and that’s how we can make a lot of these deductions. And the physical nature of the animals means they can only move in certain ways – that courtship display is a really good example of it.”

When drama and science collide, whose instincts win out – the series experts, led by British palaeontologist Dr Darren Naish, or those of Favreau, creator of Disney+ Star Wars spin-off The Mandalorian? “Jon is rather like David, he’s a polymath,” says Gunton. “Their centres of gravity may be far apart but, actually, because of the nature of their minds and the nature of their curiosity, we found a sweet spot. Jon is obsessed about the science. David is obsessed about authenticity and accuracy. It’s part of my job to keep those plates spinning. It’s a very interesting meeting of minds.”

The show’s success lies in its central conceit, that we are watching location footage. This means we must “accept the same limitations that there would be if the subjects of their film were actually alive”, says Attenborough. “You don’t put the camera just anywhere, you put it where you would do as a wildlife producer – where you’d get the intimate shots, but you would also want to be safe if things went wrong. The whole feeling is, paradoxically, that you have the most sophisticated reconstructions of dinosaurs that you’ve ever had, yet you film it with all the restrictions, care and nervousness that you’d have filming big, ferocious animals living today.”

Gunton has filmed many animals with Attenborough. Their relationship began with the BBC’s 1990 series The Trials of Life. “David is a very entertaining, funny, joyful person to be around,” he says. “He’s got a phenomenal sense of humour and sees the absurd in so much.”

There are, adds Gunton, more projects with Attenborough in hand. “When I arrived at the BBC the head of department said, ‘It’s lovely to know this project is under way, and it’s really important because this is David’s last series. We now need to be thinking about who’s going to take over from him.’ That was in 1987. If I had a pound for every time somebody said, ‘This is probably going to be David’s last series,’ I’d be a very rich man.” MICHAEL HODGES

MONEY DOESN'T BUY you happiness, but it buys you a big enough yacht to sail right up to it." This was the philosophy offered by Johnny Depp when asked to explain why he had spent just a few of his many millions on the purchase of a private island. Well, at least he was honest.

A similar lack of seemingly pretence flows through Succession, the award-winning drama that comes to a definitive end this week after four seasons of plunging a dagger into the ignoble preoccupations of the extremely rich. The need for wealth is so taken for granted that a recent scene between husband and wife Tom and Shiv saw the dysfunctional pair imagine for a moment a life without it. Tom told Shiv, "I like nice things, I do. And if you think that's shallow, why don't you throw out all your stuff for love? Come and live with me in a trailer park." Shiv's response? "I'd follow you anywhere for love, Tom Wambsgans." And they both laughed at the absurdity of such a notion.

TV dramas about rich people never used to be this unforgiving. Back in the early 1980s, there was a roll call of "good" characters to root for. In Dallas, for every chuckling JR Ewing, there was a well-meaning brother Bobby; and, in Dynasty, a decent Krystle Carrington to wrestle in the mud with scheming Alexis Colby.

When millions tuned in for Dallas, yes, the Ewing siblings constantly battled for their mother's love and father's fortune, but they continued to live under one roof and somehow always made up in time for breakfast. They were casually rich – I still remember the thrill of hearing Bobby say, "I have a plane to catch," as though it were a bus – but the larger-than-life characters and ridiculous plots made for fun, escapist viewing.

UNLIKE BERGERAC'S CHARLIE Hungerford, who clearly relished his Jersey fortune – a white Silver Cloud Rolls-Royce, a chopped cigar – Sue Ellen Ewing was an early outlier in exploring the misery beneath the mink coats. All her money (and the beauty of a former Miss Texas) couldn't shield her from the unhappiness of a treacherous marriage and a battle with the bottle. But, for the most part, Dallas, Dynasty and the latter's spin-off The Colbys shared the same palpable pleasure in their characters' trappings of wealth and privilege. When Alexis schemed to bring down her ex-husband, Blake Carrington, she invariably did it from the back of a limousine or a bath full of bubbles, champagne on ice. This kind of polished sheen wasn't really evident in the nearest we had to a home-grown equivalent, Jan and Tom Howard of Howards' Way – possibly because, for years, aspirational British TV drama concerned itself with the lure of class rather than money.

And how many early-1980s students armed themselves with a teddy bear for campus strolls after watching the dramatisation of Brideshead Revisited? I know of at least two.

In To the Manor Born, when Audrey Fforbes-Hamilton (Penelope Keith) was forced to sell her country estate, the comedy was never about the money she lost, but her swift descent in social class and tireless attempts to climb back up the ladder.

Another early hint on TV that all that glistens is not necessarily golden came in Only Fools and Horses with the fulfilment of Del Boy's dream to be a millionaire. His new-found moolah left him unsettled and hankering for his old life. Fortunately, he promptly lost it all again and returned to his market-trading ways. A contrast in the US with Fresh Prince of Bel-Air, where Will Smith adapted very easily to his life of comfort in a Los Angeles mansion and was a positive influence on all around him. More recently, we haven't had to wait for writers to invent fantastically luxurious settings as real people have been more than happy to let the cameras in on their privileged lives.

The Kardashians – Kourtney, Kim, Khloé, other people beginning with K – didn't invent the idea of squashing any self-doubt and putting their rich selves on screen; Alan Whicker was interviewing these kinds of people decades before, and Paris Hilton's The Simple Life also led the way. But the Kardashians have unarguably perfected the questionable art of revelling in their bling and putting it on display for millions.

Whatever we think of this, the success of similarly themed shows – The Real Housewives franchise, stretching from Beverly Hills to Sydney, Made in Chelsea a bit more reliant on its plush postcode – proves we viewers can't get enough of this kind of shameless excess.

WITH A BOTTOMLESS well of real-life wealth available to TV producers, screenwriters have lately instead applied themselves to exploring the presumed emptiness at its core. Following the self-absorbed tales of each of the privileged guests at paradisaical resorts in Hawaii and Sicily over two series, The White Lotus reminded me of that useful litmus test: a person who is nice to you but rude to the waiter is not a nice person. However, just in case we needed reminding, the show's creator Mike White makes it clear that behaving so selfishly brings no lasting happiness.

TV writers Mickey Down and Konrad Kay nail this message in their eviscerating portrait of investment banking, Industry. While the young graduates are playing with millions of pounds of other people's money and pocketing jaw-dropping bonuses in the process, Harper, Robert, Yasmin and their colleagues watch their souls shrink and smiles vanish while their bank balances grow. We've come a long way from JR Ewing's gleeful grin.

In the end, it's only their youth that's their saving grace. Unlike those wizened characters in Succession who bow out this week, having been given too much and learnt too little, the youngsters of Industry have at least the advantage of time on their side – and, with it, the tantalising prospect of redemption.

LOOK TO THE SKY
Visitors to Poole harbour can see
white-tailed eagles

Peter, Springwatch is heading to Dorset this year. Tell us all about RSPB Arne.

Arne is a rare mixture of habitat, combining open heathland, oak woods, farmland, salt marshes and mud flats. It's a peninsula that's surrounded by Poole harbour on three sides. It's got the largest biodiversity in the UK thanks to this close mixture of habitats within ten square kilometres. It's only 630 hectares, but sits at one end of the 3,300-hectare Purbeck natural habitat. Starting at the top of Arne, it would take you more than a full day to cross the nature reserve across Studland Beach into Poole.

What can viewers look forward to seeing?

We've got more than 3,500 species, and we're one of the relatively few places where you can see all six reptiles native to the UK, including the sand lizard and smooth snakes. We've a lot of specialist invertebrates – look out for the solitary wasps [known for their unique mixture of cannibalism, embalming and zombification of their prey]. BBC1's recent Wild Isles filmed raft spiders here – they use the surface of the water rather than a web, making a diving bell of the hairs on their bodies, and hunt underwater.

NOT SINKING
Raft spiders

Chris Packham and Michaela Strachan will be presenting from Arne – how much of the reserve will the Springwatch cameras observe?

The main camera area, which they began installing in January, is about 50-60 per cent of the site. The base is being set up in a field of a farm at the reserve's centre, where cows typically graze. Autumnwatch 2016 and Winterwatch 2017 were both filmed here, so we're completing the set – arguably, spring is the best part of year to see the most wildlife.

Springwatch has come to a new location. Peter Robertson, the senior site manager at RSPB Arne in Dorset, explains what wildlife riches we can expect to see...

Of all the species that can be found at Arne, what's your personal favourite?

When the nightjars display themselves over a heathland at night, that is an astonishing thing to witness. You get four or five males clapping their wings and making a call that one of my colleagues described as like a propeller plane as its engine conks out and comes in for a crash landing. They disappear at the end of August and they're the first birds back on the heath in April-May. I fit in as many night visits as I can to catch them and I hope to share that with a big audience.

What other birds thrive at Arne?

You'll see avocets and spoonbills and, thanks to conservation projects regularly around Poole Harbour, you can see ospreys and white-tailed eagles pretty much every day. Five years after reintroducing them, ospreys bred successfully here last year. Eagles were re-introduced to the Isle of Wight and now spend a lot of time in the harbour.

SAVED
Arne has record numbers of the Dartford warbler

Which species have you succeeded in conserving?
The presence of Dartford warblers is one of the main reasons why the RSPB first acquired the land in 1965. Back then, there were only ten pairs of the bird in the whole of the UK, two of which were in Arne; last year, we hit a record 92. We've got 60 territorial male nightjars, too [numbers are recorded by listening to the males "churring"] – our highest number ever. They're both off the Red List of threatened species now.

There was an oil spill in nearby Poole harbour in March. What impact did that have on Arne?

There was an oil slick along a 400m stretch of our shoreline. We managed to clean it up quite quickly, but it was an intensive job to remove it stone by stone along the beach and try to minimise the amount of material that had to be taken away. Fortunately, we didn't see any seriously oiled birds, just a bit on some feathers, so the short-term impact was less than it might have been. Some oil will evaporate, but we remain concerned that, in the long-term, some will get mixed into the sediment. Essentially, it would become part of the food chain – a huge number of birds feed off invertebrates in the winter, in the shallow waters of the harbour, exactly where there's a risk.

'Solitary wasps are known for their cannibalism'

What other challenges do you face looking after the land?

Converting the 67-acre Hyde's Heath, which we acquired in 2017, from a pine plantation to heathland is an ongoing job. Scots pine seed can live on for more than a century. If we didn't remove the seeds as they germinate, the whole area would soon revert to a pine forest, shading out all the species, particularly the reptiles and invertebrates, that love the warm open habitat of the heathland. As soon as you get the canopy cover, they'll disappear.

What are you most hoping Springwatch will capture on camera this season?

We have a number of colonies of ladybird spiders, which are very difficult to see in the wild. They live in tunnels 15-20cm deep and cast their web across the tunnel's mouth. They spend most of the year there and take their prey from the underside of the web. But there is a time in May when male and females travel to the surface to mate. I know of only a couple of people who've seen them – I never have. That would be exciting.

SING WHEN YOU WIN – OR LOSE

England's top-flight clubs take their fans for granted at their peril, says Simon Barnes

THE WORLD LOVES the Premier League. You may curl your lip and mutter about money and hype and how the real competition is between accountants, but the football-loving world prefers the Premier League to all others. It might be the most ferociously contested competition in all football and, for those clubs in the Championship, the league below, the sunlit uplands of the Premier League are an eternal longing.

This Sunday sees the final day of Premier League action and, after ten simultaneous kick-offs, all 20 clubs will get as close to their just deserts as any sport can offer. A day earlier it's the Championship play-off final, between Coventry City and Luton Town, which is routinely billed as the richest match in football since the prize is at least one season in the lucrative Premier League. Last year Nottingham Forest won promotion, while the three previous play-off finals were won by Aston Villa, Brentford and Fulham, who have all spent much of this season in the top half of the Premier League.

We shouldn't be surprised. What many believe to be the reason for the Premier League's popularity is the idea that, perhaps more so than in any other division, on their day any team can beat any other. Certainly, the Premier League has had five different winners in the past decade, including Leicester City, while in Germany Bayern Munich have won ten consecutive league titles and in France Paris Saint-Germain have won eight times over the same period.

The Premier League table doesn't slavishly reflect wealth. Sure, Manchester City make the most revenue in the world (according to the 2023 Deloitte Money League), but Arsenal, so brilliant this season, are tenth, below Liverpool, Manchester United, Chelsea and Spurs.

However, the significant fact is that 16 of the world's 30 richest clubs are in the Premier League. Premier League clubs tend to make more money than the rest – and that's because more people in the world want to watch Premier League football than any other kind. There are many theories about why this is: English heritage, accessibility of the English language, good

RAISING THE ROOF
Brentford fans have enjoyed promotion glory and Premier League survival marketing or the cosmopolitan nature of the league in terms of players, managers, owners and supporters.

All these play their part, but I'd argue that one reason caps all the others – and that's the soundtrack. The sound of an English football match is distinctive and uniquely involving. It sucks you in, demanding that you respond with your gut to the spectacle before you.

No other footballing nation can offer anything quite like it. Instead, there's often an amplified drum and/or a cheerleader with a microphone.

'No other nation's supporters sound like one great voice'

Sure, there is plenty of cheering and jeering going on, but it doesn't sound the same. It's not coordinated, it's not universal, it doesn't sound like one great voice.

It's not just the tradition of a vast stadium full of a cappella choristers singing songs of triumph and derision – though that's pretty important, and it tends to destroy the concept of impartiality in everyone exposed to it. But it's also the vocal response to events on the pitch.

Aaaah! But there's a different kind of aaaah for a near miss, a shot that clears the bar by a dozen feet and one that finds the top corner. You can tell what's happening in a Premier League football match from the crowd noise alone: the home team's totally on top... no, now the fight-back is on... rotten foul, someone's going to get sent off in a minute... and now the goal that changes everything.

THE SOUNDTRACK ANIMATES the action in a manner that Hans Zimmer and other top Hollywood composers can only envy. It lifts mere sporting competition and makes it something that – at least for 90 minutes – matters more than anything else on Earth. And that's why the Premier League is more compelling than all the other leagues put together.

There's a moral here: look after the people who shout. The prawn-sandwich brigade may pay more money, but the ones who shout and sing and groan and roar are not just your bread and butter, they're your caviar as well. As the Premier League continues to prosper on a global scale, the fans remain the USP.

The Championship play-off final: Coventry City v Luton Town is Saturday 3.30pm (k/o 4.45pm) on Sky Sports Football/Talksport. All ten Premier League fixtures kick off on Sunday at 4.30pm. Sky Sports, BT Sport and 5 Live are yet to decide coverage as RT goes to press – check radiotimes.com

COMEDY

Changing Ends All 6 eps available on ITVX from Thursday

This wry semi-autobiographical comedy from Alan Carr is for any child of the 1980s who lived in fear of PE. Imagine an adenoidal Adrian Mole and you're in the right ballpark. Or rather football pitch, as young Alan (Oliver Savell, a revelation) is the offspring of Northampton Town FC manager Gordon Carr (Shaun Dooley), who raises concerns that his son isn't "normal".

If abnormal means an 11-year-old obsessing over Murder, She Wrote rather than Match of the Day, then Alan is the dictionary definition. With large specs, even larger teeth and "the voice of an elderly lady", life isn't easy. But what's especially winning about this series is that Alan refuses to compromise – and the commentary from the sidelines by the adult Alan reminds viewers of who gets to have the last laugh. DAVID BROWN

DRAMA

Malpractice All 5 episodes available now

A stress-inducing shift in a busy A&E department for Dr Lucinda Edwards (Niamh Algar) ends in the death of a patient. And the official inquiry that follows almost invites viewers to become investigators – our task being to glean the hidden agendas and suss out the secrets that Lucinda looks to be keeping. It's an irresistible set-up (as you'd expect it to be, coming from the company that gave us Line of Duty and Vigil), and the fact that it's written by a one-time practising doctor, Grace Ofori-Attah, gives the series an air of scary believability. DB

This understated study of strained family relations takes sisters Rosaline and Becca (Suranne Jones and Eve Best) off to the Isle of Man, where their mother has recently died. The trouble is, neither sibling knows why their mum was there – hence their surprise when it turns out that, prior to her death, she'd been leading a double life. Some of the logistics of all this don't bear much in the way of scrutiny, but the emotional fallout is potent – particularly when it comes to Jones's portrayal of a woman whose identity has got lost in the daily drudge. DB

CRIME DRAMA

Once upon a Time in America ★★★★★ 15

Available from Thursday

■ Sergio Leone's final film is an extraordinary crime drama that chronicles the lives of two New York gangsters, played by Robert De Niro (below) and James Woods. While the plotting is often arbitrary, the film's scale is truly impressive, boasting immaculate period detail and a magnificent Ennio Morricone score. A classic of 1980s cinema, the film is all the better for the fact that we're never invited to sympathise with the corrupt, inexcusably nasty men at the story's heart.

DRAMA

I Am Ruth

Available now

When it was first shown on Channel 4 in December, this one-off drama was well received without causing too big a splash. Now that it's won Baftas for single drama and leading actress, it's ripe for a revisit. Kate Winslet and her daughter Mia Threapleton play Ruth and Freya, whose strained interactions – Ruth constantly trying to get a response from her uncooperative teenage daughter – seem at first to be standard domestic problems. But a threat is looming that Ruth cannot see at first: Freya's relationship with social media. It's a harrowing wake-up call. JACK SEALE

DRAMA

Walter Presents: What Pauline is Not Telling You

All 5 episodes available 26 May

From France, a fine psychological drama. Pauline (Ophelia Kolb, above) is a frazzled, penniless single mother, taunted by an abusive ex who refuses to financially support his children. So she goes to confront him and he ends up dead... What we, the police and her young son don't know is whether her claim, that he was deceased when she arrived and she merely found the body, is true. As a number of female authority figures wrestle with the case, an atmosphere of darkness behind closed doors is expertly realised. JS

COMEDY DRAMA

The Watermelon Woman

★★★★ 15

Available now

■ Cheryl Dunye's distinctive 1996 debut seeks to right historical wrongs in the wittiest way possible. Dunye stars as a video-shop assistant who decides to research the "Watermelon Woman", a (fictional) black actress from the 1930s. The help she receives from friends, family and her new girlfriend (Guinevere Turner, above left with Dunye) becomes the springboard for some nicely observed comedy, and an education about black lesbian heritage.

PERIOD DRAMA

Dreamland ★★★★★ 15

Available now

■ The lean times of the Great Depression are evoked in this action-fuelled period drama starring Margot Robbie as a femme fatale who lures lovestruck teenager Finn Cole into a life of crime. The film contains nods to such outlaw classics as Bonnie and Clyde and Badlands, but Dreamland takes a different tack by having the female as the chief manipulator. The leads are perfectly cast, with Peaky Blinders star Cole especially good as the lonely misfit who dreams of a happy-ever-after future for the couple in Mexico.

ACTION THRILLER The Mother ★★★

Available now

Jennifer Lopez scowls, shoots and punches her way through this Taken-style action thriller. After escaping the clutches of a weapons dealer (Joseph Fiennes), assassin "the Mother" (Lopez) leaves her newborn daughter with an FBI agent (Omari Hardwick) in order for her to be adopted into an anonymous life. Over a decade later, young Zoe (Lucy Paez, pictured with Lopez) is kidnapped by another bad guy (Gael García Bernal), prompting a tornado of violence as Mother sets out to rescue her lost cub. The tone is somewhat uneven, but Lopez is superb. JAYNE NELSON

SKETCH COMEDY I Think You Should Leave with Tim Robinson

Series 3 available Tuesday

Sketch shows might not be in vogue these days, but the genre is alive and well in this surreal character comedy. There's very little tying the skits together – creator and star Tim Robinson often but not always turns up, alongside a mix of famous and unknown faces – but almost every line has a strange kind of lyricism that creates comedy magic. In previous series, Robinson has turned phrases like "Santa came early", "the bones are their money" and "triples is best" into instant punchlines. Expect more weird and wonderful laughs here. HUW FULLERTON

DRAMA Manifest

Series 4 part 2 available Friday

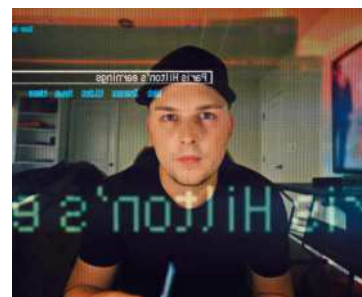

One of America's weirdest dramas finally concludes with a second batch of season-four episodes. A long time ago, it began with a flight experiencing turbulence and then landing, only then for the passengers (including Ben and Michaela Stone, played by Josh Dallas and Melissa Roxburgh, above) to be told they had been missing for five years... It has been a wild ride, and it's not likely to become any less eventful from here. JACK SEALE

FANTASY The Harry Potter Collection

Available now

All eight Harry Potter films are now available on Netflix. The Philosopher's Stone kicks off the saga, as Daniel Radcliffe's boy wizard is whisked off to Hogwarts and targeted by evil Lord Voldemort. Things get darker with The Prisoner of Azkaban and it all reaches an enchanting climax with the two-part Deathly Hallows. There are more magical adventures to be had in the first two Fantastic Beasts prequel films, starring Eddie Redmayne, also on the service.

DOCUMENTARY The Real Bling Ring: Hollywood Heist

In 2009, a gang of LA teenagers was arrested for stealing from the homes of celebrities including Lindsay Lohan and Paris Hilton, thanks in part to the fact that 24/7 coverage of famous people's lives allows strangers to know everything about them. This series, first shown on Channel 4 last year and also available to stream, tells the tale of minds warped by celebrity culture, a phenomenon the young burglars (including Nicholas Prugo, above) wanted to become a part of by wearing their idols' clothes and by becoming infamous themselves. JS

The Days

All 8 episodes available Thursday

The 2011 Fukushima nuclear disaster, caused by an earthquake and subsequent tsunami off the east coast of Japan, was the worst nuclear accident since Chernobyl. This fact-based drama re-creates the uncertainty and panic of the initial disruption, the hurried decisions made in an effort to keep citizens and nuclear plant workers safe – and the inquiries afterwards, including Chernobyl-esque scenes of volunteers stepping back into buildings humming with radiation. It's suitably intense. JS

ACTION THRILLER

Fast & Furious 9 ★★★ 12

Available Saturday

With Fast X now in cinemas, it's a timely arrival on Netflix for this previous instalment in the action franchise, in which petrolheads-turned-responsible parents Dom (Vin Diesel) and Letty (Michelle Rodriguez) answer a call to get the old gang back together. However, the mission also forces Dom to face uncomfortable truths from his past and address a threat awkwardly close to home. The outlandish plot may not survive close scrutiny (the sci-fi elements are particularly silly), but there's no denying the bravura of the audacious, adrenaline-pumping stunt sequences. TERRY STAUNTON

HORROR THRILLER

Old ★★ 15 Available from 25 May

M Night Shyamalan directs this sluggish adaptation of the graphic novel Sandcastle by Pierre Oscar Lévy and Frederik Peeters. Vicky Krieps and Gael García Bernal are the unhappy couple on holiday with their precocious kids who are directed to a secluded beach where everyone (including couple Patricia and Jarin, played by Nikki Amuka-Bird and Ken Leung, above) starts to age rapidly. The stage seems set for a classy little shocker, but while there are moments of pulse-quickening body horror, the pace drags and the big twist is easy to guess. MATT GLASBY

George Michael: a Different Story

Available from Wednesday

First shown on the BBC in 2004, this documentary was notable for featuring the first interview with George Michael and his Wham! band-mate Andrew Ridgeley since the duo's split, 18 years previously. A year in the making, it starts with the formation of Wham! in 1981 and deals with Michael's transition to solo artistry and his efforts to become a global megastar on a par with Madonna or Michael Jackson. Among the interviewees are Mariah Carey, Geri Halliwell, Elton John, Sting, Noel Gallagher, Simon Cowell and Boy George. JS

Fatal Attraction

Episodes 7 and 8 available Monday

Although well made with a good cast, this remake of the 1980s erotic thriller – with major changes to the story to fill eight hours of TV – has never been clear about what it's trying to do, and has felt rather cold and empty as a result. If you've stuck with it, however, you'll be ready for a showdown between spurned mistress Alex (Lizzy Caplan, a bit miscast) and faithful wife Beth (Amanda Peet, a bit under-used). In this version of the story in which randy lawyer Dan (Joshua Jackson) has been convicted of murder, we also find out what really happened. JS

Ted Lasso Series 3 episode 12 available Wednesday

LAST EPISODE

Some critics have been a bit sniffy about this final season of the US sports dramedy – starring Jason Sudeikis as an unconventional but guileful American, inexplicably hired to coach a top UK soccer team despite knowing nothing about the game – but the show's always been prone to forgotten storylines, odd character development and strange offshoot episodes. What it's also had, more importantly, is a wicked sense of humour and a big, big heart, and the latter's been more in evidence than ever as the lessons about kindness and tolerance have been even more proudly passed on, with standout episodes tackling racism, homophobia, mental health and social media etiquette without fear of becoming sentimental.

You can expect bittersweet happy endings in the last ever instalment: it will be a wrench to say goodbye to beloved characters like powerful but open-hearted CEO Rebecca (Eurovision superstar Hannah Waddingham), grizzly but sensitive ex-pro Roy (co-writer Brett Goldstein) and unpredictable coaching prodigy Nate (Nick Mohammed, coping heroically with a strangely written role). We've adored Ted Lasso despite its foibles – perhaps that's its biggest lesson of all. JACK SEALE

The Whale ★★★★★ 15

Available from 26 May

Brendan Fraser gives an Oscar-winning performance in this moving tale of redemption, based on the play by Samuel D Hunter. Fraser plays Charlie, a recluse desperately trying to reconnect with his estranged daughter (Sadie Sink from Stranger Things). Among those interrupting his hermit-like existence are his dead boyfriend's sister (a wonderful Hong Chau) and his ex-wife (a fierce Samantha Morton). Darren Aronofsky (Black Swan) reins in his often flamboyant style to create a penetrating examination of self-destruction. ALAN JONES

HORROR

Malignant ★★★ 18

Available from Saturday

Knowingly schlocky and drenched in atmosphere, this violent horror from director James Wan (Saw) delivers enough freaky thrills to entertain. Annabelle Wallis stars as a pregnant woman trapped in an abusive relationship whose partner is killed one night in mysterious circumstances. While detectives hunt the killer, Wallis suffers visions of other murders, and fears she's losing her mind. Malignant takes its time to get going but lets loose with a final act that ramps up the gory action. JOSH WINNING

With Sweden having won this year's Eurovision and with the 50th anniversary of their own Song Contest win coming up in 2024, interest in Abba remains high – but this documentary concerns a darker chapter of their story. Gert van der Graaf is not like most celebrity stalkers, in that he did date Abba vocalist Agnetha Faltskog for two years – but his obsessive behaviour led the singer to take out a restraining order against him a year after their split. Van der Graaf himself appears in a film about some fans' toxic relationship with their idols. JS

La La Land ★★★★★ 12

Available from 26 May

Damien Chazelle's multi-Oscar winner stars Emma Stone and Ryan Gosling as antagonists turned lovers. Stone is stellar as the barista struggling to make it as an actress, while Gosling complements her charmingly as a pianist eager to open a jazz club. The movie pays tribute to the great musicals, emulating MGM's finest, but Chazelle infuses every scene with a modern sensibility. As gorgeous in its gloom as in its wonderful whimsy, this is a dizzying whirlwind of romance and sorrow. EMMA SIMMONDS

White Men Can't Jump

★★★ Available now

■ This low-key remake of the 1992 Wesley Snipes/Woody Harrelson comedy stars Sinqua Walls and rapper Jack Harlow as a pair of financially strapped basketball hustlers. Despite their differences, they join forces to work towards a big-money tournament. The ensuing on-court trash-talking is fun, and there are amusing moments as Harlow's New Age vegan tries to sell Walls on a healthier lifestyle. The film lacks originality, but the banter between the leads ensures it remains a likeable affair. EMMA SIMMONDS

A thoughtful, heartfelt comedy about friendship, family and addiction returns, with Sam (Sofia Black-D'Elia, seated centre) nearing the end of her 20s. Having hit rock bottom as an alcoholic and returned to her hometown when the show began, she's now a year and a half sober and has, step by painful step, built a new life in Boston. The deftly drawn supporting characters get more time as the series continues to demonstrate how flaws needn't define a person for ever. JACK SEALE

ADVENTURE

Crater ★★★★★

Available now

■ This sweet treasure-seeking adventure plays out like The Goonies on the Moon. Mourning the death of his father, Caleb (Isaiah Russell-Bailey) leaves his moonbase home to travel to a mysterious crater that his dad wanted him to visit. He's joined by his friends, who help him to steal a rover, and whose own personal struggles come to light over the course of their quest. The young cast is excellent, and the more profound concepts of John Griffin's script are well handled by director Kyle Patrick Alvarez. JAYNE NELSON

Lyle, Lyle, Crocodile

★★★ PG Available from 26 May

■ Will Speck and Josh Gordon direct this (mostly) live-action adaptation of Bernard Waber's children's story, which features songs from The Greatest Showman's Benj Pasek and Justin Paul. Josh is a nervous kid, but his confidence soars after he befriends a shy crocodile called Lyle. Javier Bardem plays a wacky entertainer from Lyle's past; Constance Wu and Scoot McNairy are Josh's concerned parents. The film is an oddity, but its snappy protagonist is endearing (Shawn Mendes provides his singing voice). ES

CRIME DRAMA

To Catch a Killer

★★★★ Available from Saturday

■ When a sniper shoots 29 people from a Baltimore skyscraper, plucky cop Eleanor Falco (Shailene Woodley) is drawn into the investigation by FBI boss Geoffrey Lammark (Ben Mendelsohn). What follows recalls any number of serial-killer films, but Argentinian director Damian Szifron (Wild Tales) ensures it remains gripping. There's strong procedural detail, the wintry setting is suitably oppressive and there's a tense grocery store stand-off. Best of all is Mendelsohn as the beleaguered Lammark. MATT GLASBY

GORY COMEDY

Cocaine Bear ★★★★★

Available now

■ Using a real-life incident as its jumping-off point, Cocaine Bear sees a group of characters converge on the territory of a coke-addled black bear, who has devoured the drug after it was dumped from a smuggler's plane. Keri Russell plays a nurse who traces her school-skipping daughter (Brooklyn Prince) to a Georgia forest, while Ray Liotta (in his final film role) is a crook trying to retrieve the cocaine. Director Elizabeth Banks brings deranged energy to the table in an eccentric twist on slasher-movie conventions. ES

Allelujah ★★★★★

Available from Monday

■ This wryly amusing adaptation of Alan Bennett's 2018 play is set around a fictional Yorkshire hospital that's run by no-nonsense Sister Gilpin (Jennifer Saunders). While various factions protest the hospital's proposed closure, the plot also circles the comings and goings of the patients, including Judi Dench's former librarian and Derek Jacobi's ex-teacher. Saunders is the standout, but the emotional tug comes from David Bradley's ex-miner. JAMES MOTTRAM

Love to Love You, Donna Summer

9.00pm Sky Documentaries
Catch up via Sky Go/Now

"The possibilities of a black girl from Boston going to Germany and becoming successful in the American pop field is like a million-to-one shot." That recap in this eye-opening film flags up its big plus point: much of it is told (via archive interview) by the Queen of Disco herself, who died at 63 in 2012 from lung cancer.

Her many awards and breakthroughs are covered (the late 70s was an exhilarating time for music, and I Feel Love still sounds like it's from space), even if her 80s renaissance is under-represented. Yet the film is not afraid to visit dark places: abusive relationships, being ten seconds from killing herself and, much too briefly, the comment that devastated her gay audience.

What fascinates is the clash of her work and home personas: the sexy image created by her 1975 moanathon Love to Love You was totally at odds with her private self, seen extensively in home movies (the film's co-director is her daughter Brooklyn Sudano). In one candid moment the contentedly creative Summer noodles at the piano, before a phone call changes her mood drastically. On this evidence she found it hard to switch off from performance mode – even the no make-up mum delivers a pitch-perfect song. But fame was slowly replaced in her priorities by family. Or as she says, "It doesn't bring me what they bring me." MARK BRAXTON

At half the size of New York's Central Park, the country of Monaco is hardly big enough to fit in a normal race circuit. So just how did it become home to motorsport's most glamorous Grand Prix? It's a story as twisty as the Monaco track itself...

This documentary will get fans' engines revving nicely ahead of tomorrow's race. It lays out the event's history (it was first run in 1929), shoehorns in archive snippets of action on the nerve-shreddingly narrow circuit and even explains quite how the city's normally quiet winding streets are transformed each year. Quite frankly, though, it's a wonder anyone notices the snake, such is the emotional anguish among the staff. You've got Jacob (Charles Venn) still consumed by guilt, Faith (Kirsty Mitchell) craving prescription meds – honestly, what a dysfunctional lot they are. Still, at least there's a textbook Casualty accident to deal with, as a guy working on a 5G mast falls 40 feet following a set-to with a conspiracy theorist. DAVID BROWN

Dust off your glittery lipstick/Andy Warhol wig and pretend you're at Studio 54, because Jessie Ware is in the house, and her new album is an effective throwback to 70s disco funk. Talking of Jessie Ware, her former producer Dave Okumu also appears, with his band the 7 Generations. Their latest album is a diverse yet cohesive mash-up of styles, tied together with a strong cultural narrative.
And tonight's black sheep are surely the most unlikely pop stars of their generation. Iggy Pop favourites Sleaford Mods have done more to spread the Nottingham accent than anyone since This Is England director Shane Meadows, and are always happy to polarise opinion. GARY ROSE

MUSIC

The 1975 x Radio 1's Big Weekend

10.20pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer
The 1975 are as adept at generating hit songs as they are controversial headlines. To date, the band have had five number one albums with their brand of boppy, indie pop. But lead singer Matty Healy has also come under heavy criticism; at best he could be described as "problematic", with his actions both on and off stage proving contentious. The son of Loose Women panellist Denise Welch and actor Tim Healy has also been causing a stir after being rumoured to be dating US pop star Taylor Swift.
Hopefully it will be the music that's centre stage tonight in Dundee, with a set that includes Happiness and I'm in Love with You. FRANCES TAYLOR TV PREVIEWS EDITOR

DOWN TIME

Annika (Nicola Walker) takes time out from a murder case to talk to Morgan (Silvie Furneaux)

DRAMA

Annika

9.10pm BBC1
Full series available on iPlayer
Norse tales are the literary key that Detective Inspector Annika Strandhed (Nicola Walker) uses to unlock this week's case. So, if you want to keep up with her, pay close attention to her delivered-to-camera monologue about the mythical women who chose which people would be slain on the battlefield.
The body of a man is found on a small boat (called Valkyrie – what else?) drifting in the Clyde. Beside him is a stone etched with runes, which the team initially think is a token from a jilted lover. But there's a much darker angle to the murder and lots of murky secrets to uncover.
As if Annika's job wasn't hard enough, her troubled daughter Morgan is suspended from school for having neat vodka in her water bottle. JANE RACKHAM

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Casablanca ★★★★★ 2.00-3.40pm BBC2 U

ROMANCE Like Citizen Kane and Gone with the Wind, this classic has been dissected to within an inch of its life by scholars. It's a timeless love story wrapped in a gripping wartime thriller, written with such wit and meaning it's still quoted (and misquoted) decades later. Humphrey Bogart plays the cynical nightclub owner who becomes embroiled with Paul Henreid's Resistance leader after he shows up with Bogart's old flame, Ingrid Bergman. Michael Curtiz directs it all with verve, symbolism and emotion. Documentary Ingrid Bergman in Her Own Words is showing on Thursday BBC4 – see choice p91. ANDREW COLLINS (US 1942, BW, HD)

Rio Bravo ★★★★★

1.25-4.15pm C5 PG

WESTERN This film is one of the finest achievements in the western genre and stands as a career high for many of its participants. John Wayne is the sheriff who upsets local rancher John Russell when he arrests his brother, and fights to keep the man behind bars. Superb photography and a Dimitri Tiomkin score provide the icing on an impressive cake. TONY SLOMAN (US 1958, HD)

Emma ★★★★★ 3.50-

6.15pm Great Movies U

ROMANCE Gwyneth Paltrow is a delight here as the quintessential Jane Austen heroine, who entangles her friend (Toni Collette) in hopeless passion instead of finding a suitable match for herself. The film is laced with delicious wit and features fine support from Jeremy Northam, Juliet Stevenson and Alan Cumming. ALAN JONES (UK/US 1996)

Shanghai Knights

★★★ 6.45-9.00pm ITV2 12

COMEDY Sheriff Jackie Chan and outlaw Owen Wilson reteam and relocate to Victorian London for this spry sequel to Shanghai Noon. After a brisk opening segment, the action slows a little, but Chan's action scenes are still as inventive and meticulously choreographed as ever. ADAM SMITH (US 2002, edited for content, HD)

The Equalizer 2 ★★★★★

ACTION In this rip-roaring instalment of the muscle-car franchise, Dom (Vin Diesel) seems to have betrayed those closest to him by joining forces with a cyber-terrorist (Charlize Theron). It's up to his friends (Dwayne Johnson, Michelle Rodriguez, Tyrese Gibson) to foil her plans and bring him home. Fast 9 is new to Netflix this week (see p35), while Fast X is now in cinemas. A.J. (US 2017, violence, swearing, HD)

COMEDY DRAMA Orson Welles's funny and poignant tribute to Shakespeare is new to Talking Pictures TV this week. A distillation of five plays, it follows bloated boozier Falstaff (Welles) and Prince Hal (Keith Baxter), as the royal heir evolves from wastrel to King Henry V. Shakespeare has rarely been rendered for the screen so cleverly. JEREMY ASPINALL (Svi/Sp 1966, violence, brief nudity, BW)

Hellboy ★★★★★

10.20pm-12.30am ITV1 12

FANTASY Having worked his magic on Blade II, director Guillermo del Toro repeated the trick with this comic-book adaptation. Ron Perlman brings unusual depth to the cigar-chomping demon intended by the Nazis for evil, but instead raised by the Allies as a force for good. The film offers an exciting mix of action, horror and romance. SLOAN FREER (US 2004, violence, swearing, HD)

A Little Chaos ★★★★★

10.55pm-12.45am BBC4 12

ROMANCE Love blossoms for two gardeners in this spirited movie, which marked Alan Rickman's directorial debut. Set at Versailles in 1682, it sees a landscape architect (Matthias Schoenaerts) recruit a widow (Kate Winslet) to help build a garden for Louis XIV (Rickman). The central romance isn't that engaging, but the film is charming. STEPHEN CARTY (UK 2014, sex scenes, brief nudity, HD)

American Made ★★★★★

11.20pm-1.25am C4 15

BIOPIC Tom Cruise stars here as Barry Seal, the real-life pilot who spent much of the 1970s and 80s playing the CIA and Mexican cartels off against each other. Cruise is his usual charismatic self, while Domhnall Gleeson adds a touch of darkness as his CIA contact, but director Doug Liman rarely penetrates the surface of the story. VICTORIA LUXFORD (US 2017, swearing, HD)

DRAMA

Midsomer Murders

8.00pm ITV1

Catch up via ITVX

Back in January, a crime was committed of the most brutal kind, when ITV schedulers did away with Midsomer Murders. Yes, days before transmission, a new episode was shelved in favour of a Tom Bradby interview with a book-promoting, soul-baring Prince Harry. In the battle of Bradby v Barnaby, the newsman won out, and RT readers were left miffed to have missed out on the scenes of bucolic slaughter they'd been eagerly awaiting.

But nearly half a year later, we finally get to see what was culled and, thankfully, it's a mystery worth waiting for, with Barnaby seen coming face to face with Lewis. Or Kevin Whately, at least. But, still, it's the kind of meet-up you'd expect to tear a hole in the space-time continuum. Whately, though, isn't on detecting duties – rather, he's found his way onto the suspect list, playing a member of a murderous amateur dramatics group performing The Pirates of Penzance.

And this outing also has the bonus of seeing Barnaby's sidekick Winter taking to the stage – and proving that a policeman's lot is not a happy one. DAVID BROWN

GAME SHOW

Sitting on a Fortune

7.00pm ITV1

Catch up via ITVX

Not everyone was convinced by Gary Lineker's family-friendly game show when it was first aired in 2021 (and a few pointed out that the BBC's highest-paid presenter was the one sitting on a fortune) although it got an audience of around two million, so it wasn't all bad news.

The idea is that six players compete in an all-or-nothing game where the correct answer to a general knowledge question keeps the contestant in the "money chair", while a wrong one sends them back down the line to start over again.

So, it's a bit like musical chairs but with the potential to win a £100,000 prize at the end.

Gilbert & Sullivan's The Yeomen of the Guard

8.00pm BBC4

Catch up via iPlayer

Written in the 1880s, originally set in the 16th century and in this performance from last year, updated to the 1950s, The Yeomen of the Guard remains one of WS Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan's more thoughtful comic operas. In the safe hands of English National Opera (no staging gimmicks here) the vast expanse of the London Coliseum gives the cast space to romp, and romp they do.

A surprisingly cheery Colonel Fairfax (Anthony Gregory) languishes in the Tower of London, framed by his cousin, who will inherit his fortune unless the colonel marries before he's executed. Needless to say, all sorts of delightful shenanigans follow. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

PROPERTY

Château DIY: Living the Dream

8.00pm More4

Catch up via C4 Streaming

The retrospective series continues to revisit British families who tackled ambitious restoration projects in France. Twelve years ago, musicians Ben and Billie bought Château La Grande Maison, a few miles south of the Loire Valley. Since moving into the 1860-built castle with daughter Ella, they've been enthusiastically turning it into their dream home and hospitality business.

We see the makeover of the old ballroom, the launch of a dining area in the orangery and bell tents arriving for a riverside glamping site in the grounds. To round off proceedings in chic style, the couple host a special event for their friends. We'll raise a glass to that. MICHAEL HOGAN

Ten Pound Poms

9.00pm BBC1

Full series available on iPlayer

The gulf in understanding between then and now is at its most stark in episode three. You'd hope that in 2023, Kate wouldn't be separated from her son in the way she was in the 1950s. Terry, meanwhile, would almost certainly now be diagnosed with PTSD, and son Peter be considered neurodivergent. But here, there's this blunt one-size-fits-all approach that leaves everyone unfulfilled.

The more things change though, the more they stay the same, as we see when Terry and wife Annie attend the launch night of Australian TV. Anyone who's been a member of a studio audience will agree with Terry's verdict: "It's like watching a play. But with people in the way." DBr

NEW SERIES Film-maker Ed Stafford immerses himself in what are, by reputation, some of the most dangerous places in Britain, by living on the country's most notorious council estates. His first dispatch is from Northumberland Park in Tottenham, north London, where gun crime and drugs are a fact of life.

Community projects and food banks are keeping people alive, but the lack of basic services is unbelievable: Stafford meets Dionne, a mum of six stuck in a one-bedroom council flat riddled with black mould. The image of her little boy struggling to breathe will stay with you.

The Ghost of Richard Harris

9.00pm Sky Arts

Catch up via Sky Go/Now

There's a clip in this loving, feature-length profile where we see Richard Harris simply open a door and stand there, blue eyes blazing – it's up there with Brando and Burton. That hard gaze and the rolling baritone would have been enough even without his grand physique, or the anger that he couldn't explain but which fired many great performances.

All are explored in Adrian Sibley's dream-like assemblage of clips and tributes, first shown last year.

There is much more to Harris than the roistering hellraiser, the film argues, but it's fun to hear about the hellraising anyway.

The Man Who Played with Fire

Catch up via Sky Go/Now

With everybody pointing the finger at everyone else over the 1986 murder of Sweden's PM Olof Palme, Jan Stocklassa was no closer to solving what some dubbed "Europe's JFK shooting". Then he read in Stieg Larsson's research dossiers about Bertil Wedin, a possible middleman, and links to South Africa.

The latter seems likely as we hear from the son of the ANC's Oliver Tambo, that Palme was "the driving force in humanitarian aid and in covert military assistance" against apartheid. The story that evolves is like a spy thriller, but it's also a shocking reminder of the horrors of apartheid. JR

DOCUMENTARY

Barry Humphries at the BBC

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Goodnight, possums! It's time for the BBC to wave their gladioli in tribute to the comedy legend, who died last month. He appeared on the Beeb countless times as

"Melbourne housewife superstar"

Dame Edna, boorish cultural attaché Les Patterson and occasionally himself – always guaranteed to upstage and unnerve any host.

Quite why this clips package is fronted by Alex Jones is anyone's guess – "and I mean that in a caring way, viewers", as Edna would say. But there should be an abundance of footage, hopefully going right back to his salad days in the UK's satire boom of the 1960s.

At his core Humphries was a satirist and, as he told RT in 1969, taking a Down Under look at Britain would always pay dividends. "I don't want to sound too self-important, but most of the really great satires about England have been written by outsiders." PATRICK MULKERN

7.00pm Queen Victoria: My Musical Britain
In this programme, made in 2019 to celebrate Queen Victoria's 200th birthday, Lucy Worsley discovers how the sovereign used music to transform the monarchy from a political power into a benevolent cultural force that united the nation during a time of upheaval. She examines the role music played in Victoria's life as a queen, and reveals how Victoria and Albert shaped the musical culture of Britain, establishing the Royal College of Music and the Royal Albert Hall. The programme also features performances from Willard White, the BBC Symphony Orchestra and Black Dyke Brass Band.

DAY

You Only Live Twice ★★★★★

4.15-6.30pm ITV1 PG

SPY This is one of the best Sean Connery Bond films, despite the actor's desire at the time to quit the series. Agent 007 fakes his own death before heading to Japan to investigate the disappearance of US and Russian spacecraft and prevent the outbreak of World War Three. Director Lewis Gilbert keeps the pace up, helped by Roald Dahl's arch script, and the film has a great villain in the cat-stroking Blofeld (Donald Pleasence). Production designer Ken Adam also delivers the good with his volcanic secret base, where the climax unfolds. ANDREW COLLINS (UK 1967, may be edited for violence, HD)

Lover Come Back ★★★

1.15-3.00pm BBC2 PG

ROMCOM This dig at the world of advertising sees Doris Day reunited with her Pillow Talk co-star Rock Hudson. It's a film very much of its period, but the idea of Madison Avenue executives marketing a nonexistent product remains a good one, and the anti-advertising jokes are still funny. The script was Oscar-nominated, although the finale is astoundingly tasteless. TONY SLOMAN (US 1961)

Alice through the Looking Glass ★★★

2.15-4.00pm BBC1 PG

FANTASY In this sequel to Tim Burton's 2010 filming of Alice in Wonderland, the Mad Hatter (Johnny Depp) asks Alice (Mia Wasikowska) to help him find out what happened to his lost family. While it isn't the most focused of plots, the visuals are dazzling and kids are likely to just take it as it comes and enjoy the ride. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US 2016, HD)

Galaxy Quest ★★★★★

3.55-6.00pm C4 PG

SCI-FI In this entertaining spoof, actors from a sci-fi TV show are mistaken for the real thing and recruited to defend a dying alien race.

The Groundstar Conspiracy ★★ 10.00-11.55pm Talking Pictures TV

DRAMA New to Talking Pictures TV, this is an effective thriller about spies in the US space programme. George Peppard plays the government official who interrogates Michael Sarrazin after an explosion at a secret facility. Director Lamont Johnson handles the suspense well, and the Vancouver locations look splendid, although the script could have been tighter. TS (Can 1972, violence, swearing)

Safe House ★★★

10.20pm-12.20am ITV1 15

THRILLER The world of CIA rookie Ryan Reynolds is turned upside down after rogue agent Denzel Washington is delivered to the safe house he mans in Cape Town. When the bolt hole is attacked, it forces the pair to go on the run. There's fine work from Brendan Gleeson and Sam Shepard in supporting roles, and director Daniel Espinosa delivers some dizzying chase scenes. TERRY STAUNTON (US/SAfr 2012, violence, swearing, HD)

Three Billboards outside Ebbing, Missouri ★★★★★

11.00pm-1.15am C4 15

CRIME Martin McDonagh's film is far from your average underdog story. Frances McDormand is on formidable, Oscar-winning form playing a woman who funds an ad campaign to shame the local police after they fail to catch her daughter's killer. However, the film's real strong point is the surprise redemption arc of Sam Rockwell's dim-witted racist cop. DAMON WISE (US/UK 2017, violence, swearing, HD)

University Challenge

Catch up via iPlayer

SERIES FINALE It is the end of days. The ravens are leaving the Tower. After almost three decades, tonight is to be Jeremy Paxman's final edition of University Challenge. When news of his departure was announced around eight months ago, he said: "I've had a blast hosting this wonderful series for nearly 29 years. I've been lucky enough to work with an amazing team and to meet some of the swottier brains in the country. It gives me hope for the future."

Hope for the future is something long-term fans of the quiz show are clinging on to. There was a lukewarm reaction to Amol Rajan's appointment as the new host, and recent pictures reveal a – shudder – "modernised" new set, along with a jazzier title sequence.

But back to tonight, and the finale is a fittingly hard-fought battle (no spoilers as to between which teams), with happily more than one "Come on, let's have it please" from the cantankerous chair. I won't reveal how Paxman signs off his last episode, but it's typically understated and forthright. Frankly, you wouldn't expect anything less.

Sarah Beeny's New Country Lives

5.00pm C4

Catch up via C4 Streaming

NEW SERIES There's a double dose of La Beeny today, albeit with confusingly similar titles. Her new teatime series follows intrepid rural newbies making fresh starts by swapping city smog for country air. First up, she meets James, who is opening a boutique hotel, while Gary and Annette enter their village scarecrow competition.

Come 8.00pm, Beeny's own family are the focus. In the final episode of their Somerset-based series, Sarah and husband Graham build her dream greenhouse, on a grand scale. They also take their sons to a Worm Charming festival and the CarFest music weekender. She's one busy woman. MICHAEL HOGAN

SOAP

EastEnders

7.30pm (10.40pm in Scotland) BBC1

Catch up via iPlayer

The Minute Mart on Bridge Street will find its stock of ultra-balm tissues depleted over the coming days as poor Lola is set to breathe her last. Danielle Harold has done a grand job depicting her character's tragic decline, so hopefully she'll now have a successful post-soap career.

Should co-star Jamie Borthwick also ever leave Walford behind, I reckon he'll have no problems landing acting jobs. He's been with the BBC1 soap man and boy, so we haven't had a chance to see him play anyone else apart from Lola's husband Jay. But that recent revelatory scene where he sang Wonderful Tonight was a real heartbreaker; I'd love to see him spread his wings further than the Square. DAVID BROWN

NATURE

Springwatch

7.30pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

It's been six years since Autumnwatch (now shockingly axed) and Winterwatch were at Arne, and now it's Springwatch's turn to be based at this RSPB reserve in Dorset. Situated on Poole Harbour – where last year a pair of ospreys became the first in over 200 years to breed in southern England – it's a special site, also home to the largest flock of spoonbills in the country and one of only a handful of places where all six reptiles native to the UK can still be found.

This is where Chris Packham and Michaela Strachan will be stationed, while Iolo Williams is poised at nearby Purbeck Heaths and Gillian Burke heads further afield to north Wales. Expect the usual: live cameras, "mindful moments" and high drama. FT See feature: page 28

Katharine Hepburn: Call Me Kate

8.00pm Sky Arts

Catch up via Sky Go/Now

Katharine Hepburn was a titan of Hollywood's golden age who continued making movies well into the 1990s. This new documentary makes good use of home videos and forgotten audio interview recordings of Hepburn herself to retell the stories of her life, touching upon everything from her troubled long-term relationship with Spencer Tracy to the persistent rumours about her sexuality.

It's much more a tribute than it is an investigation, though, paying homage to a spiky, powerful screen presence that lit up movies from The Philadelphia Story and Bringing Up Baby to Rooster Cogburn and On Golden Pond. CERI THOMAS

DRAMASteeltown Murders9.00pm BBC1 Full series available on iPlayer

Steeltown Murders does, at times, feel like New Tricks without the laughs. It's essentially the same set-up, with a trio of old male officers and their younger female boss reinvestigating a cold case. But because this series is based on real events, it's solemn and respectful.

Three episodes in and it's starting to seem as though we've exhausted all the tension to be found in DNA testing. Maybe the flashiness of CSI and the gruesomeness of Silent Witness have coarsened tastes, but the low-lit scenes featuring mugshot-filled whiteboards and requests by detectives to swab suspects' mouths are, I'm sorry to say, slightly dull by comparison. DB

DOCUMENTARYOnce upon a Time in Northern Ireland9.00pm BBC2 Full series available on iPlayer

The vivid first-hand history of the Troubles continues with the second half of 1972 and Bloody Friday, a one-day IRA bombing campaign that brought a different kind of fear to the residents of Belfast. The theme of the episode is how terrifyingly swift the descent into self-perpetuating sectarian violence was. Many of the interviewees here talk with shock and remorse as they recall the terrible things they and those around them did.

Towards the end of the decade, some hope for reconciliation arrives as young people are brought together by an unlikely saviour: punk rock. JACK SEALE

DOCUMENTARYUnreal! with Olivia Neill9.50pm BBC3 Catch up via iPlayer

Unreal is the right word to describe this programme, which sees Northern Irish social media star and influencer Olivia Neill exploring some of the most outrageous life choices being made by her Gen Z audience. In particular, she gives dating in the metaverse a go, which essentially means wearing a headpiece, using hand tracking devices and interacting with people virtually.

The newly single 21-year-old joins in but it's obvious her heart's not really in it. And who can blame her? While the content is mind-boggling – people are using app-controlled “fk machines” to have long-distance sex, guys – the show, like the concept of virtual dating itself, leaves you cold. KAY RIBEIRO

DRAMA*Succession2.00am (early Monday), 9.00pm Sky Atlantic Catch up Sky Go/NowLAST EPISODE

Despicable they may be, but the Roys and their associates have legions of supporters and we'll be bereft once this series concludes.

The content of this feature-length finale is closely under wraps, but one small nugget I'm fairly certain of is that crucial scenes were filmed at an opulent beach villa in Barbados. With Brian Cox's Logan dead, the question of succession is still wide open, and I've had my sights pinned on cousin Greg since his ignoble, vomit-spraying debut in season one.

The entire cast deserve plaudits for helping us love their loathsome characters. Any of them could carry a spin-off, but it's better to bid them a final goodbye – and perhaps seek solace in a darkened room listening to Nicholas Britell's majestic score on a smart speaker. PATRICK MULKERN See feature page 26; Travel page 136

Let Him Go ★★★★★

THRILLER Diane Lane and Kevin Costner didn't get to do much as Ma and Pa Kent in 2013's Man of Steel, so it's a joy to see them reunite for this "western on wheels". They play married couple Margaret and George, who worry for the safety of their infant grandson when he is whisked off to a new home in the countryside. Deciding to intervene, the couple come up against the boy's new family, including Lesley Manville's cunning grandmother. With its brittle characters and open spaces, Thomas Bezucha's film is a slow-burn masterclass. JOSH WINNING (US 2020, violence, HD)

Bugsy Malone ★★★★★

U

MUSICAL Alan Parker's film debut casts children as gangsters in Prohibition-era New York. Using techniques borrowed from old Hollywood movies, as well as the polish that he learned from making TV commercials, Parker creates a vibrant pastiche. The children – most notably Jodie Foster as club singer Tallulah – have an edge that cuts through the hokum. ADRIAN TURNER (UK 1976)

Doctor in the House

★★★★★ 12.45-2.30pm

Talking Pictures TV

U

COMEDY This film launched the popular St Swithin's series and made a matinee idol out of Dirk Bogarde as Simon Sparrow. Kenneth More, Donald Sinden and Donald Houston are on top form as the medical students doing retakes, but stealing all their thunder is James Robertson-Justice as Sir Lancelot Spratt. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1954)

Smallfoot ★★

PG

COMEDY A tribe of yeti living happily up in the Himalayas are forced to re-evaluate all they hold dear in this animated feature. Yeti lore here insists that "smallfoot", or humans, don't actually exist – putting Migo (voiced by Channing Tatum) in a bit of a conundrum when he encounters a crashed pilot. It's serviceable enough entertainment, if a bit heavy on the furry pratfalls.

TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 2018, HD)

Battle of Britain ★★★★★

PG

WAR EPIC This tribute to "the few" has spectacular air battles, a truly memorable re-creation of the Blitz and a terrific cast that includes Michael Caine, Robert Shaw and Christopher Plummer. It is also interesting to watch so many great actors in the twilight of their careers, not least Ralph Richardson, Michael Redgrave and Trevor Howard. TONY SLOMAN (UK 1969, edited for violence, language, HD)

Shazam! ★★★★★

12

ACTION Director David F Sandberg salutes and mocks the superhero movie in this laugh-packed tale. Asher Angel plays a foster-home runaway who can transform himself into a lycra-clad beefcake (Zachary Levi) on saying the word "Shazam" – yet still retains the mind of a boy. Sequel Fury of the Gods is available to rent and own next week. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2019, edited for content, HD)

Mercury Rising ★★★★★

ACTION In this smart thriller, Bruce Willis plays a renegade government agent who turns protector to a child (Miko Hughes) who has cracked a security code. Alec Baldwin co-stars as the crooked operative determined to hunt them down. Director Harold Becker manages to impart a little depth to the relationship between Willis and Hughes among all the chases and shoot-outs. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1998, violence, swearing, HD)

GoodFellas ★★★★★

CRIME Martin Scorsese's depiction of the attraction and brutal reality of the Mafia lifestyle is a masterwork on every artistic level, with direction, script, camerawork and soundtrack combining to dazzling effect. Ray Liotta, Robert De Niro and Joe Pesci lead the fine acting ensemble in a film that crackles with raw energy from the first frames to the last. ALAN JONES (US 1990, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, nudity, HD)

Nomads ★★★★★

10.55pm-12.45am Legend

15

THRILLER This supernatural tale stars Pierce Brosnan as a French anthropologist in LA who is drawn to a gang of street punks (led by Adam Ant), who are in fact demons. The film marked the directorial debut of John McTiernan, who went on to make Die Hard, and he bypasses the 1980s fad for excessive gore and sex, focusing instead on atmosphere and scares. ROBERT SELLERS (US 1985, violence, swearing, sex scenes)

DRAMA

White House Plumbers

9.00pm Sky Atlantic

Catch up via Sky Go/Now

NEW SERIES

The corruption of the Nixon administration has been dramatised on film before, po-facedly by director Oliver Stone and with a sardonic air in last year's Gaslit starring Julia Roberts. Here we're edging closer to farce, with Watergate orchestrators E Howard Hunt and G Gordon Liddy portrayed more as bunglers than ace burglars.

In the roles of the self-styled "plumbers" whose job it was to plug any leaks of classified information, stars Woody Harrelson and Justin Theroux are obviously having a blast, the former all indignant chin and reactionary growls, the latter a preening fool with a collection of Hitler speeches on LP.

And what we sense immediately is that both Hunt and Liddy are fast being promoted above their abilities, a track record of botched undercover operations seeing them handed greater responsibility when they really ought to have been jettisoned out of the White House before any campaign to re-elect the President got under way. Exhibit A: their investigation into the leak of the damning Pentagon Papers, which they make a hash of here in episode one. DAVID BROWN

Waterloo Road

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

There's an air of the Rishi Sunak about Waterloo Road's new shift in ethos away from the arts. "Tech not tamborines," is how governor Mr Choudhry puts it as plans to install new computers on the premises are unveiled. But for music teacher Val, the brutal truth is that her subject will stop being studied after year 9 (that's third-year seniors in old money).

Someone else not happy with the change is drama supremo Amy, though she may be more concerned by the fact that her badly misjudged move on caretaker Donte in last week's episode is about to become the talk of the school. How? Well, Amy, if you will leave your microphone open and connected to speakers when conducting a private conversation... DB

FOOD

MasterChef

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

It's finals week and the four amateur cooks are talking Turkey because they're off to Kuzuncuk, a Turkish village where they'll be making two well-known local dishes under the watchful eye of chef Refika Birgul. Next it's on to Istanbul's only double Michelin-starred restaurant, Turk, to work a busy lunch service with chef Fatih Tutak. After that they must somehow summon up the energy to create lunch for the British Consulate General and his guests.

Nobody is sent home, though – well, obviously they're sent back to the UK, but nobody leaves the competition until tomorrow's edition, when the last three will cook for a group of culinary legends that includes Sat Bains and Tom Kitchin.

Forensics: the Real CSI

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Investigating the cause of a massive fire, such as the one that broke out at a Birmingham plastics recycling factory in 2020, is frustrating because, as fire investigator Luke Beckett explains, crucial evidence is destroyed by both the flames and by the water the firefighters use to extinguish them.

We join him as he picks through the tangled mass of debris trying to ascertain how and where the blaze started, but it's retrieved CCTV footage that makes the team suspect it was arson. However it's impossible to get a pin-sharp close-up so there's still a lot of investigative work to be done before Beckett and the West Midlands Police can be sure whether or not someone was playing with fire. JR

ART

Close to Vermeer

9.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

Billed as the largest Vermeer show ever put together, the Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam's Vermeer exhibition sold out almost as soon as it was announced. Suzanne Raes's film connects with the experts who helped put the show together – for most it was clearly a labour of love, as they seem to all have a very personal reaction to the artist's jewel-like interiors and portraits. Not least Rijksmuseum curator Gregor Weber, who's almost in tears as he describes the first time he saw a Vermeer at the National Gallery in London.

If you haven't seen the exhibition, or the accompanying film doing the rounds in cinemas, this may help you understand why the Dutch master is still so treasured. GILL CRAWFORD

The Blackouts of 74: When Britain Went Dark

9.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

A three-day working week sounds attractive but, as those of us of a certain age know, when this happened in the 1970s it wasn't much fun. Britain was lurching from one economic crisis to another when Ted Heath's government announced that commercial consumption of electricity would be limited to three days a week. Factories went on to short time and workers already coping with rising prices and food shortages had to take a wage cut.

Evocative archive reveals how grim it was as households coped with power cuts, and Trevor McDonald, Toyah Willcox, Pete Waterman and Fern Britton are among those sharing their recollections. JR

DOCUMENTARY

Gender Wars

10.00pm C4

Catch up via C4 streaming

The topic of gender has become the hottest of cultural and political potatoes. The more impassioned that those on opposing sides of the argument become regarding how a society defines sex and gender, the wider the gulf seems to grow. This is a cursory glance across a polarised issue, featuring interviews with those who have spoken out on all sides of the debate. Among them is Kathleen Stock, a writer and former university professor who has said she doesn't think trans women are women. It's not hard to predict the fallout.

This one-off documentary won't offer a ceasefire in the ongoing war and, if anything, it'll only stoke the flames. FT

DRAMA

Perry Mason

10.05pm Sky Atlantic

Catch up via Sky Go/Now

This is one craftily plotted courtroom drama, so we ought to have predicted that there'd be further twists after the revelation that the Gallardo brothers were responsible for shooting Brooks McCutcheon dead.

For a while, it looked as though it was case closed. Guilty as charged. But now we discover this was actually a murder-for-hire job and that Rafael and Mateo were in the pay of another Los Angeles resident. But who? In this city of angels, there are a fair few devils to choose from. And over the course of this pacy hour of intrigue filled with moral quandaries, even private investigator Paul Drake (Chris Chalk) is left wondering whether he's wearing a halo or horns. DB

DOG TIRED
Will it work out for Ashley (Harriet Dyer) and Gordon (Patrick Brammall)?

SITCOM
Colin from Accounts 10.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

SERIES FINALE
Ashley (Harriet Dyer) and Gordon (Patrick Brammall) seemed further apart than ever at the end of last week's penultimate episode. They now both find themselves standing in a park, waiting for the rightful owner of their dog on wheels, Colin – sorry, Bandit – to come and pick him up.
So can this really be the end? Not only for Ashley and Gordon as a couple, but for the pair of them as unlikely dog co-parents? To say either way would spoil what happens next, but don't expect the neatest tie-up for this spiky romcom. However, the crucial question for its swathes of loyal fans is: can this really be the end of Colin from Accounts? Of a potential second series, Brammall said recently: "It's not commissioned yet. We're still waiting on the green light." Surely we won't be kept waiting too long for good news? FRANCES TAYLOR

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Denmark ★★★ 11.15pm-12.40am BBC2 15

COMEDY DRAMA In this whimsical, blackly comic tale, Herb (Rafe Spall) decides that life in a cushy Danish prison would be better than struggling on in his Welsh coastal town. He smuggles himself across the North Sea on a container ship, but Herb's plan to get arrested mid-bank robbery proves a non-starter, especially after he's adopted by a stray Irish wolfhound. There are a few too many contrivances in Jeff Murphy's screenplay, but as Herb's mental torment increases, director Adrian Shergold sensitively balances the comedy and the desperation of his bizarre adventure. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 2019, swearing, HD)

The Cockleshell Heroes

★★★★ 12.40-2.45pm Film4 U

WAR Directed in England by American José Ferrer, this exciting film sees Royal Marines go on a secret mission to destroy enemy shipping. Ferrer also leads the cast as the unorthodox major who devises a night-time raid on the Bordeaux docks. Trevor Howard plays Ferrer's resentful captain and watch out for Christopher Lee as a submarine commander. TONY SLOMAN (UK 1955, HD)

Sudden Fear

★★★ 3.45-6.00pm Talking Pictures TV PG

THRILLER Joan Crawford suffers various agonies in this film noir, in which she accidentally discovers her husband is plotting to kill her. The woman's whirlwind passion for someone as clearly sinister as Jack Palance strains credulity, but the film remains a visual treat, and is forcefully acted under the direction of David Miller. ALLEN EYLES (US 1952, BW)

Castle Keep

★★★ 5.05-7.15pm Great Action 15

WAR This early effort from director Sydney Pollack is strange indeed: a heavily allegorical Second World War

The Favourite

9.00-11.25pm Film4 15

BLACK COMEDY The capriciousness of court is explored in this tragicomic take on the reign of Queen Anne. Flanking the ailing and erratic queen (played by Olivia Colman) are her lover Lady Sarah (Rachel Weisz) and Sarah's cousin/rival Abigail (Emma Stone). The cast is superb, but Colman stands out, and her performance earned her an Oscar. EMMA SIMMONDS (US/UK/Ire 2018, violence, swearing, sex scenes, nudity, HD)

Mad Max

10.00pm-12.05am ITV4 18

ACTION This highly inventive and violent action picture made a star of Mel Gibson and spawned a franchise. Gibson is at his mean and moody best as a heroic cop, one of the few who are left trying to hold together a disintegrating society in a bleak and desolate future. What the film lacks in repartee, it makes up for in rip-roaring spectacle. ALAN JONES (Aus 1979, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

Witchcraft

11.00pm-12.35am Talking Pictures TV 12

HORROR A 300-year-old family feud takes a terrible supernatural turn in this moody British horror. Jack Hedley is the construction boss whose work accidentally unleashes a long-buried sorceress (Yvette Rees), much to the chagrin of Lon Chaney Jr's formidable family patriarch. The veteran scare star provides a touch of bombastic menace in what amounts to a watchable B-movie. JA (UK 1964, violence, BW)

STAG PARTY
David Hartley
(Michael Socha) returns home to Yorkshire

DRAMA

The Gallows Pole: This Valley Will Rise 9.00pm BBC2 Full series available on iPlayer

NEW SERIES

Those who have followed the career of screenwriter and director Shane Meadows (see box, right) will recognise many of his hallmarks here. There's the naturalistic, semi-improvised dialogue, spoken by actors with whom he's collaborated in the past, including Michael Socha and Thomas Turgoose. We also see that familiar focus on class, specifically the left-behinds in society, whose faces suggest they've suffered.

But what's entirely new is the setting – 18th-century Yorkshire, a time when the weavers who feature in this true-life story are facing obsolescence thanks to the merciless force of the Industrial Revolution. It's a fresh direction for Meadows and for the genre of period drama, which he takes by the scruff of the neck and gives a shake we can feel through our screens.

What will unfold over the weeks ahead is a tale of resistance, large-scale fraud and forgery. But first, we must meet its principal players, most notably the mysterious David Hartley (Socha), home for the first time in seven years, with a stab wound in his gut and a dark secret in his soul. DAVID BROWN

Emmerdale

7.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

Even the most ardent Emmerdale fan must have trouble keeping track of where Mack's (Lawrence Robb) affections lie. One minute he's devoted to Charity, the next he's cheating with Chloe, then he's being thrown over by both before the whole not-so-merry-go-round begins again.

At least today there's a twist, with Mack doing the rejecting as he turns Chloe down when she leans in for a kiss. But – despite all this philandering and romancing – Mack isn't half as much fun now as when he was first introduced as this dodgy "little bit weerrrr, little bit weeeeey" chancer. Time to go back to basics, I think. Surely Cain has a spare shotgun and balaclava lying around that he can use? DB

Kirstie and Phil are revisiting past contributors to see how their advice worked out. Back in 2014, newlyweds Liz and Carl had £450,000 to find a marital home in Hertfordshire. They had two vital key requirements: outdoor space and close proximity to a pub. Kirstie and Phil gently coaxed them to consider a future that might involve kids and we'll get to see if they were right to do so.

Meanwhile, in 2016 they helped house buyer Lynn find a home in Bangor for £115,000 that suited her needs and satisfied her discerning guide dog Lucy, who – brilliantly – always made her feelings abundantly clear. Did it all work out for Lynn and Lucy? Fingers and paws crossed. KAY RIBEIRO

A Paedophile in My Family: Surviving Dad

9.00pm C4
Catch up via C4 streaming

This staggering documentary will make your stomach lurch. Emily is a successful businesswoman in her 30s, but her adult life is conducted in the grim shadow of her childhood, throughout which she was sexually abused, at home, by her father. She talks to her teachers, friends and, dramatically, her mother to ask why – in the years before Emily found the strength to speak out – didn't anyone realise something was amiss?

The answer is in the way abusers are also master manipulators, something the film sheds invaluable light on. Emily's immense courage also provides a note of hope, as she shows how she's learnt to survive the trauma and shame. JACK SEALE

Catch up via Sky Go/Now

In 2021, David Fuller was found guilty of murdering two women, Wendy Knell and Caroline Pierce, alongside a hideous string of mortuary crimes. He will never be released from prison. This haunting two-part documentary gives voice to some of Fuller's victims via terribly sad contributions from their devastated loved ones. The details of his crimes, which remained unsolved for over 30 years, are too gruesome to go into here but as one of the police officers involved in the case says, "I don't think anyone could've predicted what we found... the investigation has stolen a piece of my soul." You have been warned.

The Long Roads

10.00pm BBC4

Catch up via iPlayer

"God, why do you make the world so beautiful and then make us leave it?" It hasn't been repeated in 20 years but here's a chance to revisit what playwright John McGrath considered one of his best works. This affecting 90-minute drama follows an elderly woman, played by Edith MacArthur, who learns she is dying of cancer. She and her husband (Robert Urquhart) leave their croft on the Isle of Skye to visit their children – now miles apart, both geographically and socially – to tell them the news. En route, the couple rekindle their love for each other. Written after McGrath's own parents died, it's a deeply personal piece. Poignant, but ultimately rather joyful. MICHAEL HOGAN

Our House

10.45pm (11.05pm on STV) ITV1

Full series available on ITVX

This four-parter based on Louise Candlish's novel got a mixed reception when it was first shown last year but, while a few scenes land with a clunk, there's something addictive about it, too.

It starts with a grabby premise – mother-of-two Fi (Tuppence Middleton) returns to her lovely home to find someone else has bought it and her possessions have gone. Through flashbacks we learn how her apparently perfect marriage to Bram (Martin Compston) broke down and how they "birdnested", taking turns to live in the house so the children didn't have to move. So far, so civilised, but things take a darker turn. JANE RACKHAM

COTTONING ON
Can Sara (middle) chivvy the contestants along in the windbreak challenge set by Patrick and Esme?

CRAFT

The Great British Sewing Bee

9.00pm BBC1

Catch up via iPlayer

Like Bake Off's Paul Hollywood, Patrick Grant has a talent for speaking volumes without saying a word. A non-committal stare or a raised eyebrow is all it takes to stress out a contestant, especially when it's clear he thinks they've chosen the wrong fabric to make a rucksack.

This week's theme is travel and some of the stitchers probably wish they were somewhere – anywhere – else as they struggle with the bag's webbing straps and sturdy zips. Wickedly, Patrick and Esme Young then announce they're giving them a break for the transformation challenge: a windbreak to make into a waterproof outfit. Their final challenge is made-to-measure swimwear, giving Sara Pascoe plenty of scope for watery puns and Esme the chance to comment on crotches and gussets. JR

In the penultimate show of finals week, the last four are tasked with creating interpretations of classic dishes, with one unlucky cook having to leave the competition. The remaining three are sent to central London for the unique chance to work at the three-Michelin-starred restaurant Core, where they each take on one of owner and head chef Clare Smyth's dishes for a select group of chefs including Sat Bains, Tom Kitchin, Jonny Lake and Nieves Barragán Mohacho. Continues tomorrow 8pm. (S) (AD) (HD)

9.00 The Great British Sewing Bee

RT 2/10 Series 9. This week the contestants are tasked with making garments for a travel wardrobe, starting with a sturdy rucksack. This fiendishly tricky challenge involves complex strap construction, complete with metal hardware for adjustment, and they must also add a robust lining. For the Transformation round they head to the seaside to sculpt windbreakers into emergency rainwear before creating some made-to-measure swimsuits. Which contenders will make a splash? And who will take a nose dive and be the second contestant sent home by judges Patrick Grant and Esme Young? Presented by Sara Pascoe. See page 81.

FILM OF THE DAY

Ace Ventura: Pet Detective ★★★★★

7.15-8.50pm Great Movies 12

COMEDY This smash-hit movie turned Jim Carrey into a comedy sensation. The rubber-faced star plays a bumbling detective hired to find the kidnapped dolphin mascot of the Miami Dolphins football team. Your reaction to the film will largely depend on whether you find Carrey's distinctive style of physical comedy – often compared to that of Jerry Lewis – stupidly hilarious or downright annoying. Tom Shadyac directs with an anarchic energy and quirky imagination, while Courteney Cox and Sean Young pop up in supporting roles. ALAN JONES (US 1993, edited for language)

It Happened Tomorrow ★★★★★

11.00am-12.45pm Talking Pictures TV

FANTASY During his wartime exile in Hollywood, French emigré René Clair made I Married a Witch, And Then There Were None and this clever, enjoyable film. Set in the 1890s, it sees reporter Dick Powell's career take off after he's given the scoop on tomorrow's news – before it actually happens. The cast includes veteran Jack Oakie as a mindreader and Linda Darnell as Powell's girlfriend. TONY SLOMAN (US 1944, BW)

Hannah's Law ★★

1.00-2.45pm Great Action

WESTERN Wild West movie clichés get a female twist in this commendable but overly sanitised revenge flick. Set in late-1800s Dodge City, the tale sees Sara Canning's bounty hunter tracking the gang that slaughtered her family. It's great to see Canning holding her own in what's generally a male domain. SLOAN FREER (US/Can TVM 2012, edited for violence)

The Running Man ★★★★★

4.45-6.55pm Film4 PG

CRIME Director Carol Reed's unerring ability to conjure up atmosphere is very much to the fore in this hugely entertaining three-handed with his rib-tickling turn as K's younger incarnation.

STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US 2012, edited for content, HD)

13 ★★ 9.00-10.55pm Great Action 15

THRILLER Georgian filmmaker Gela Babluani went to Hollywood for this remake of his cult hit 13 Tzmeti, but something got lost in translation. Sam Riley is the cash-strapped electrician who finds himself entered into an underground game of Russian Roulette. The match sequences are tense, but the subplots slow the story down. JOHN FERGUSON (US 2010, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

The Road ★★★★★ 10.50pm-1.05am Great Movies 15

DRAMA John Hillcoat's bleak adaptation of Cormac McCarthy's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel is set in a post-apocalypse future, where a man and his son make a perilous journey across America. Viggo Mortensen is the careworn dad, while Kodi Smit-McPhee gives a touching performance as the vulnerable boy. TREVOR JOHNSTON (US 2009, violence, swearing, nudity)

The Death of Stalin

★★★★ 11.45pm-1.25am BBC2 (not in N Ireland) 15

SATIRE Armando Iannucci's decidedly different "horrible history" puts a broad comedic spin on the Soviet dictator's demise. Simon Russell Beale (as secret police boss Beria) and Steve Buscemi (as future leader Khrushchev) stand out among an outstanding cast in what is a well-written and beautifully played movie. DAVE ALDRIDGE (UK/Fr/Can/Bel 2017, swearing, violence, HD)

GENEALOGY

Who Do You Think You Are?

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Viewers of this series have got used to watching celebrities unearth sad tales of the workhouse, poverty, prison, concentration camps or slavery in their family trees, but there's nothing like that in composer Andrew Lloyd Webber's trawl through his family history.

In tonight's opening programme of the genealogy show's 20th series, the impresario quickly uncovers some very posh relations: a knight who played a pivotal role in the Battle of Waterloo and a powerful Tudor duchess who, after being married off to a much older man who subsequently died, shockingly married for a second time to someone beneath her social status.

However, what Lloyd Webber most wants to find out is whether there are any musically minded people in his ancestry. That takes a while, but his research eventually takes a tuneful turn when he investigates his father's side of the family. He knows his grandfather was both a plumber and occasional tenor, but he needs to go way back – and abroad – before he finds a cellist like his brother Julian and a composer like him. JANE RACKHAM

Coronation Street

7.30pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX

We have grown so accustomed to the Monday-Wednesday-Friday transmission pattern of Corrie that a Thursday episode feels kind of illicit, as if we're trespassing on the Street when it ought to be out of bounds.

Once a year, however, ITV1 likes to air the soap each weeknight as a double bill with the Britain's Got Talent semi-finals. So that's why we're in Weatherfield tonight – or at least its local court, where the trial of Justin the acid attacker is about to get under way.

Poor Roy, meanwhile, is at the hospital being prepped for his operation. A supportive Evelyn is there to squeeze one of his hands, the other presumably still tightly gripping that shopping bag of his.

Bangers and Cash: Restoring Classics

8.00pm Yesterday

Full series available on UKTV Play

It's always a joy when love meets money. Here, where the Bangers and Cash team buy a distressed classic vehicle at auction, delegate its restoration to enthusiastic experts and re-auction it, the love for a beautiful car should, hopefully, result in profit. It adds up to a show that's both impossibly sweet yet surprisingly ruthless when the time comes to selling on the motors.

This week, the team discover a rare Renault Clio Williams 2 with 150,000 miles on the clock and a 1978 Puch VZ50 moped that's in need of some tender loving care. There's a twist at the end, not least in where the Puch purchaser intends to store his prize...

Strike: inside the Unions

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

With the febrile situation of sweeping industrial action surely requiring balance of thought and communication of the salient issues for it to be resolved satisfactorily, it is unfortunate that employers and government representatives have refused to take part in this series.

Pat Cullen, general secretary of the Royal College of Nursing, takes centre stage for tonight's second and final part, discussing why her members have decided to withdraw their labour for the first time in the union's history. The focus also falls on Amazon's Coventry factory, where workers prepare to launch the first UK strike for the global behemoth. GABRIEL TATE

ENTERTAINMENT

Taskmaster

9.00pm C4

Catch up via C4 streaming

After ten weeks of potato catches, faked deaths, magnetic spoons and dirty canal pineapples, the curtain falls on the 15th series.

Frankie Boyle, Ivo Graham, Jenny Eclair, Kiell Smith-Bynoe and Mae Martin have all acquitted themselves well through the lunacy, but only one can claim victory – and the hideous golden trophy in the shape of Greg Davies's head – in this final test of skill, luck and general resourcefulness.

Expect elastic band disfigurement, vaselined bananas and haunting dog lullabies, as well as a monumentally stupid missed opportunity with a hose that may go down in the annals of the show. HUW FULLERTON

Alexander Armstrong in Sri Lanka

9.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

Alexander Armstrong concludes his good-natured travelogue by leaving behind the well-trodden tourist trail to learn how ancient history and recent conflicts are shaping the lives of Sri Lankans.

This involves a close encounter with cobras, a scary experience locating and destroying landmines and attending a Hindu music festival. Those of a sensitive disposition should note that the latter involves Armstrong removing his shirt. "I've had more warm damp body hair brushed against me in the last two hours than I've ever had in my life!" he chortles afterwards. JR

Great British Dog Walks with Phil Spencer

9.00pm More4

Catch up via C4 streaming

Striding through the Yorkshire Dales on a snowy day in March, Phil Spencer can't resist a "good nose" into an empty limestone barn, known locally as a "cowuss", short for cow house. "Kirstie would convert this in a flash," he laughs.

He's meeting up with Paralympic sprinter Libby Clegg and her guide dogs Hatti and Bramble for another "epic" walk. While Spencer's chats with his guests are illuminating – in this edition, for instance, he and Clegg talk about her blindness, the mental health issues she has faced and her stint on Dancing on Ice – the hilarious antics of his dog Luna are delightfully distracting. JR

DOCUMENTARY

Ingrid Bergman in Her Own Words

10.40pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer

It's ironic that a woman who was deeply affected by the childhood loss of her parents should have been such a middling mother. For while Hollywood legend Ingrid Bergman's daughters Pia Lindstrom and Isotta and Isabella Rossellini all agree that she was fun to be around, they wish they had seen more of her.

Director Stig Bjorkman makes solid use of the family archive in this Imagine... documentary, first shown in 2018, while actor Alicia Vikander reads poignantly from Bergman's letters and diaries. But the absence of any in-depth analysis of her career will frustrate those hoping for an insight into one of the screen's most natural talents. DAVID PARKINSON

MasterChef

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Pink chicken is never going to get you to the final of MasterChef (nor should blue rice in my humble opinion, but that's another matter entirely), and there have been several occasions when John Torode and Gregg Wallace have rejected an undercooked poultry dish on health and safety grounds. Happily, though, it's unlikely that any of the talented finalists this year will make such a rookie error tonight. They have faced some tough culinary challenges, yet still managed to serve restaurant-standard food – by which I mean you'd be happy to pay for it.

The original 45 cooks have been reduced to a trio, who are preparing a three-course meal that could change their lives for ever. Once Torode and Wallace have chewed over their decision, we will find out who is following in the footsteps of last year's winner Eddie Scott. JR

9.00 Who Do You Think You Are?
RT New series. 1/8 Series 19. Andrew Lloyd Webber. As the long-running series in which celebrities trace their family trees returns, composer Sir Andrew Lloyd Webber attempts to find out where his showbiz genes and love of musical theatre originate from. By following his mother's line, Andrew soon uncovers a certain Uncle Peregrine, who played a key role under Wellington at the Battle of Waterloo in 1815. Meanwhile, on his father's side, he learns that his great-great-grandfather Henry Simmonds was a missionary who dedicated his life to helping the poor. As the search continues, Andrew is astonished by parallels to his own life, including an ancestor with, like himself, a famous cello-playing brother. Narrated by Phil Davis. See page 90.

COMEDY DRAMA Set in Oslo, this Norwegian-language drama traces the 20s of a woman named Julie (Renate Reinsve, above), who is unsure of what to do with her life and who to spend it with. Julie makes the kind of mistakes that would usually cast her as a villain, but, thanks to Reinsve's irresistible charisma, she is far from what the film's sarcastic title suggests. Joachim Trier directs with playful verve, from a kiss that would rival any romcom's to a dinner party with magic mushrooms on the menu. MAX COPEMAN (Nor/Fr/Swe/Den/US 2021, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse, HD)

Buck and the Preacher

★★★★ 1.00-3.05pm Great Action

WESTERN This lively wagon train picture marked Sidney Poitier's first film as director. He also stars as the leader of a group of freed slaves making their way through the wilderness. Also among the cast is Poitier's great friend Harry Belafonte (who passed away in April), who gives real edge to the role of a conman preacher. TOM HUTCHINSON (US 1972, violence, racist themes)

Towed in a Hole

★★★★ 2.05-2.30pm

Talking Pictures TV

COMEDY In one of the most memorable Laurel and Hardy shorts, the pair play fish salesmen who decide to buy and fix up a boat in order to double their income. The best sequence involves Stan getting his head stuck behind the mast, while Oliver is up a ladder painting it. Many of the laughs derive from anticipating the mayhem to come. BRIAN BAXTER (US 1932, BW)

Alive and Kicking

★★★ 3.00-5.00pm

Talking Pictures TV

COMEDY Sybil Thorndike, Kathleen Harrison and Estelle Winwood are a joy in this slight but diverting slice in the meticulous battle scenes, this is a mightily credible history lesson. TH (It/USSR 1970, HD)

Body of Lies

★★★★ 10.00pm-1.00am Quest

THRILLER Leonardo DiCaprio

stars in this Middle East-set political thriller as a CIA agent sent to Jordan by his boss (Russell Crowe) to track down a terrorist mastermind. Complicating matters is Mark Strong's local intelligence chief. Scott orchestrates the action with his usual flair and there are some telling points about America's war on terror. JOHN FERGUSON (US 2008, violence, swearing, HD)

Battle Royale

★★★★ 10.00pm-12 midnight

Sky Sci-Fi

ACTION This darkly satirical

Japanese thriller sees a class of teenagers taken to an island where they must fight for their lives, with the winner allowed to rejoin society. A film of contrasting moods, this features moments of bleak comedy and grotesque horror, as well as some inspired murderous set pieces. DP (Jpn 2000, violence, swearing)

King of Thieves

★★★★ 11.40pm-1.20am BBC1

(starts 12.25am in N Ireland)

CRIME The Hatton Garden robbery over Easter weekend in 2015 is stylishly recounted in this all-star movie. Michael Caine plays the criminal mastermind, while Michael Gambon and Paul Whitehouse provide the comic relief. But it's Jim Broadbent who makes the biggest impression, as his avuncular exterior gives way to genuine menace. TERRY STAUNTON (UK 2018, swearing, HD)

Hidden Treasures of the National Trust

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Cragside, one of three National Trust jewels in the North East featured in this edition, is famous for being the first house in the world to be lit by hydroelectricity. That's a claim to fame in itself, and the Victorian mansion is undoubtedly spectacular, but it's the little behind-the-scenes details about these places that makes this series so delightful. I loved seeing volunteers Jenny and Gleniss painstakingly cleaning Lady Armstrong's massive shell collection. "People – usually men – ask why we don't just pop them into the dishwasher," scoffs

Gleniss, who's been doing this endless task for decades.

We also get to peek inside Seaton Delaval Hall, once home to a hedonistic Georgian family (they liked to play tricks on their party guests, such as attaching the furniture to the ceiling) where the staff discover a painting of two sisters that's got too many feet – and Cherryburn, the birthplace of wood engraver and naturalist Thomas Bewick.

GARDENING

Gardeners' World

8.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

While Monty Don is busy at Longmeadow with colourful trailing plants, Toby Buckland is enjoying the spectacularly colourful displays in the rose gardens of Mount Ephraim Gardens in Kent. The home to the Dawes family since 1695, the ten-acre garden once boasted a permanent garden staff of 12 and an "improvements" gang of 20.

Meanwhile, if you saw the first programme in this series, you may remember the botanical garden on the west coast of Scotland that former record label boss Matthew Young "somewhat accidentally" bought over the internet. The GW team return to see how he's getting on with a three-acre garden boasting more than 4,000 plant species. JR

The Big Interiors Battle

8.00pm C4

Catch up via C4 streaming

After last week's curve ball (no spoilers here), we're back on more familiar territory. The remaining wannabe interior designers have returned to the old Sheffield cutlery factory and the apartments they're hoping to win, with tonight's task being to decorate the spare room.

However, judge Dara Huang is very clear that she doesn't want to see the same old thing from them. That's tough enough but then, halfway through the episode, she sets another challenge that makes them panic: to create a piece of furniture or decorative item from the unused bits (let's be honest, it's mostly rubbish) departed competitors left behind.

It makes the lock-out sequence especially tense this week. JR

TRAVEL

Susan Calman's Grand Day Out

8.00pm Channel 5

Catch up via My5

Susan Calman loves fog, which is just as well because it's often misty on the Isle of Man. This island in the Irish Sea has its own laws, traditions and language, so strictly speaking, this is the first time she's taken her campervan Helen "abroad".

There are plenty of vintage gems for the childlike Susan to exclaim over, including the oldest electrically operated tram in the world from which on a clear day (which it's not) passengers can see the Lake District.

However, the weather does perk up when she visits a motor museum and finds a car that's "the perfect fit" for her: the minuscule three-wheeled Peel P50. JR

MUSIC

Santana: Hymns for Peace

9.00pm Sky Arts

Catch up via Sky Go/Now

Aided by a series of albums with starry guests, in 2004 Carlos Santana and his band were enjoying success that had eluded them since the 70s. For the second of two nights at the Montreux Jazz Festival, they tried something different: a near-three-hour concert of mostly covers under the (very) loose banner "Hymns For Peace".

Those hoping to hear Black Magic Woman, Maria Maria or Smooth hoped in vain, but there were assorted cameos, including a stellar Steve Winwood and jazz giants Herbie Hancock and Wayne Shorter. And while he doesn't sing himself, Santana dazzles on guitar.

DRAMA

Sister Boniface Mysteries9.00pm Drama
Catch up via UKTV Play

Sister Boniface already has the most brilliant mind, so the last thing you'd think she'd need is for it to be expanded. And yet someone here decides to dose her with LSD, the resulting trip seeing the nun getting nautical as she conjures images of mermaids and pirates. It's a strange scene, played light-heartedly as so much of this series is, but tonally odd, as spiking is hardly a laughing matter.

The rest of the episode, though, is traditional with Sam and Ruth posing as a married couple to probe a sighting of the missing Baron. Along with the mystery-solving, screen time is given over to the pair's sparky "will-they-won't-they?" romance.

COMEDY DRAMA

Black Ops9.30pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

As ex-PCSOs Kay and Dom try to unravel the conspiracy surrounding the death of their boss, the cover-up runs deep. Somehow it now involves drug dealers, senior police officers and an upmarket care home, the latter of which is the setting tonight.

Going undercover once more, Kay and Dom try to eavesdrop on a meeting between a resident and a suspect (spoiler alert: it doesn't go that well), though their cover story allows for a little light satire about the state of care for the elderly and a seriously disgusting moment with a can of packed meat.

As ever, you're more likely to gently chuckle than belly laugh, but the twists and turns of the plot keep things pacy. HUW FULLERTON

COMEDY DRAMA

Bump

11.30pm, 12 midnight (not Wales)

BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

It's Mother's Day and while several of the female characters are getting breakfast in bed (although one unfortunately gets breakfast on bed), Oly receives beautiful sentiments in her hand-drawn card from daughter Jacinda (with help from dad Santi).

It's the start of a painful dance between the two young parents in this double bill of the Australian comedy drama. The scriptwriters are presumably not prepared for them to get back together just yet, no matter how much we viewers want them to.

There are some laughs, though: Angie thrashing her family in a go-kart race and Dom totally wrong-footed when he meets the users of his friend-matching app. JR

MURDER WILL OUT
Crime-solver
Charlie Cale
(Natasha Lyonne)

DRAMA

Poker Face9.00pm, 10.10pm Sky Max

Full series available on Now

Much as I'm loving Natasha Lyonne's channelling of Columbo in the way Charlie Cale disarms suspects with that raspy, aw-shucks delivery of hers, there is another element to this series that's equally terrific. And I'm talking here of the inventiveness of the killers, whose ingenious acts of dispatch open each episode.

Maybe I shouldn't commit this to print in case I ever make it on to a real-life suspect list, but these are some smart (if psychopathic) cookies we're dealing with. Take the evildoers in tonight's double bill – at first we see a restaurateur do something nifty with a radio recording to cover his tracks, then members of a heavy metal band connive creatively to rid themselves of a threat.

These aren't spoilers, by the way, as the chief focus of Poker Face is the exposure of a known criminal, which Charlie always does with style. DB

Ronin ★★★★★ 9.00-11.25pm Film4

THRILLER Although it was made in the 1990s, John Frankenheimer's film resembles a 1970s European spy caper in terms of atmosphere and it bounds along at a cracking pace. There's also a sobering political slant as Robert De Niro travels to Paris to join a gang of mercenaries (including Sean Bean, Stellan Skarsgård and the always watchable Jean Reno) who have been hired by Irish revolutionary Natascha McElhone to steal an important suitcase. No excuse is missed for a frenzied car chase or the chance to add a menacing hard edge to the deliciously convoluted plot. ALAN JONES (US 1998, violence, swearing, HD)

The Mark of Zorro ★★★★★ 12.35-2.30pm

Talking Pictures TV U SWASHBUCKLER This wonderful adaptation of the great romantic legend is one for children of all ages. Matinée idol Tyrone Power is Don Diego Vega, alias the masked avenger known as Zorro. Ty is the equal (well, almost) of predecessor Douglas Fairbanks Sr, while Basil Rathbone makes a superb villain – and the swordfights are terrific. TONY SLOMAN (US 1940, BW)

Tarantula ★★★★★ 2.55-4.30pm Legend

SCI-FI Director Jack Arnold's big-bug shocker features excellent special effects for a 1950s B-movie. Scientist Leo G Carroll is trying to solve world famine from an isolated desert lab and injects a spider with nutrients that cause it to grow to enormous size before escaping. The stillness of the desert allows Arnold to mount the tension impeccably. Look out, too, for Clint Eastwood as a jet pilot. AJ (US 1955, BW)

Oliver! ★★★★★ 3.15-6.10pm Film4

MUSICAL Reprising the role of Fagin that he made famous on stage, Ron Moody brings a wealth of wit and wisdom to this screen version of the Lionel Bart musical. Mark Lester is a bit too sweet as orphan Oliver Twist, who joins Fagin's gang of London pickpockets, but Oliver Reed is a darkly brooding treat as Bill Sikes. The film won six Oscars, including best picture. TS (UK 1968, HD)

Transformers ★★★★★ 6.10-9.00pm Film4

SCI-FI Aliens bring their long-standing feud to Earth in this testosterone-fuelled franchise-opener. Human hero Shia LaBeouf gets rather lost amid the CGI spectacle, but the sheer wow factor of cars and helicopters turning into the iron giants is astonishing. The latest in the series, Rise of the Beasts, is released in cinemas next week. AJ (US 2007, edited for content, HD)

Zombieland ★★★★★ 9.00-10.50pm Great Movies

HORROR COMEDY New to Great Movies this week, this fitfully funny and splatter-filled road movie sees Jesse Eisenberg, Woody Harrelson, Emma Stone and Abigail Breslin form a reluctant alliance on a post-apocalypse Earth overrun by zombies. Bill Murray also joins in the fun in an extended cameo where he mercilessly sends up his own career. AJ (US 2009, violence, swearing, drug abuse)

The Crucible ★★★★★

Talking Pictures TV

DRAMA Arthur Miller's play about suspected witchcraft in 17th-century Massachusetts is brilliantly brought to the screen by director Nicholas Hytner. Daniel Day-Lewis is characteristically intense as a married man caught in the middle, but the real fireworks come from Winona Ryder, as the wicked catalyst of the events. A contemporary new adaptation of The Crucible begins its run at the National Theatre next week. JASON CARO (US 1996, violence, brief nudity)

Once Were Brothers: Robbie Robertson and the Band ★★★★★

10.35pm-12.10am BBC4

DOCUMENTARY This film about rock legends The Band is based on main man Robbie Robertson's 2016 memoir Testimony. Director Daniel Roher blends studio jams with archive footage, and doesn't shy away from the drink-and-drugs years. A Who's Who of rock and folk royalty is on hand to bear witness to the group's enduring influence. ANDREW COLLINS (Can 2019, HD)

Eastern Promises ★★★★★ 12.35-2.15am BBC1

THRILLER Director David Cronenberg's gangster movie stars Naomi Watts as a midwife who stumbles into an underworld of people-smuggling among London's Russian population. Viggo Mortensen is excellent as a Mob driver and Armin Mueller-Stahl is threatening as the gang's leader. ADAM SMITH (UK/Can/US 2007, violence, swearing, a sex scene, nudity, HD)

John Finnemore's Souvenir Programme

Saturday 2.45pm Radio 4

THERE WAS A moment during a sketch in series eight of John Finnemore's Souvenir Programme when Margaret Cabourn-Smith, one of the show's brilliant ensemble cast, seemingly abandons a piece about a self-righteous young man refusing to accept that he has failed his driving test and breaks the fourth wall. "Somewhere this seems to have degenerated into a generic, hacky piece about millennial snowflakes," she faux complains, indicating that while Finnemore was 33 when the series began he was 41 at that point. "Maybe what's happened over the course of this show is that you've gone from a young person who finds old people irritating to an old person who finds young people irritating in real time."

"I'm glad you liked that," Finnemore laughs. "I'm 45 now and it's only going to get truer. I suppose that is what excites me about Souvenir Programme. It's interesting to see how a sketch show changes and I suppose we can also all learn together the exact moment when I stopped being funny. People will be able to say, 'Oh yeah, he really went off the boil in 2021. That was the end of it.'"

Except, of course, he didn't and it wasn't. Following a Covid-enforced change of format for series nine in 2021, the award-winning sketch show has had a "factory reset" and is back this week with a 45-minute special. "We were unable to have a studio audience during the pandemic so I thought I'd rather not have an audience at all," Finnemore explains. "We ended up with a narrative exploration of a whole family going back through time. Once we realised how different it was going to be, I did think about calling it John Finnemore's Family Album. But it was commissioned as Souvenir Programme; it's got the same cast and there are lots of other things to link it. I go back and forth over whether that was the right decision. The downside was it wrong-footed some people who thought they'd signed up for something else, but I'm really proud of it. I think it's one of the best things I've done."

MEET THE TEAM
From left: Carrie Quinlan, Simon Kane, John Finnemore, Lawry Lewin and Margaret Cabourn-Smith

That's quite a recommendation coming from the man who gave us four series of the much-vaunted Radio 4 sitcom Cabin Pressure (2008–14), along with contributions for David Mitchell and Robert Webb, Dead Ringers and many other hit comedy shows. However, the progression from vice-president of Cambridge Footlights to full-time professional writer wasn't quite as effortless for the Berkshire-born English graduate as might be assumed. "In the early days I sent off some unsolicited sketches to [Channel 4's] Smack the Pony," he remembers. "I got three short sketches on straightaway. I thought, 'Great, turns out I'm a TV writer. This is going to make my career easier.' It was the last series and I didn't get another thing on TV for about four more years."

Undaunted and inspired by Victoria Wood, A Bit of Fry and Laurie and the work of Armando Iannucci and Chris Morris (in particular, On the Hour and The Day Today), he continued to develop his own style. "You should never try to write or submit something that you don't find funny, but you've got to try to make it funny in the way that the show works. Some people are really good at it. I think it's a real skill and I don't really have it." Fortunately, he hasn't needed it. Finnemore decides the format and the content for the shows that bear his name.

HE WAS RECENTLY recruited by Iannucci to join a US-style writer's room on the sci-fi comedy Avenue 5. "I really enjoy writing with other people because you laugh a lot more in the room, but I've done most of my writing by myself. A six-part series of Souvenir Programme is three hours of radio and it takes about half a year to write. I don't want to stop doing it and I don't want the standard to slip, so the new idea is to do one show a year.

"We will do that until either Radio 4 get sick of it so we can't do any more, or there will be the death of the universe. Nothing else could possibly happen to stop it." BILL BORROWS

DRAMA Fukushima

Wednesday 11.30am World Service
(also available now on BBC Sounds)

The earthquake and subsequent tsunami that hit Japan's Pacific coast in March 2011 resulted in widespread loss of life and caused an emergency at the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant, forcing the evacuation of more than 160,000 people. Intercutting the urgent human drama and chilling soundscape on the ground with an even-voiced commentary on the official line (narrated by Romola Garai, below), this documentary drama tells the story of the race to contain a catastrophe almost as great as Chernobyl. Episode one has a student journalist snooping around the contaminated exclusion zone ten years after the event.

DOCUMENTARY Archive on 4: Marvel vs DC Comics: Contest of the Champions

Saturday 8.00pm Radio 4

With no end to the proliferation of superhero yarns on film and television, documentary-maker and lifelong comic fan Simon Hollis takes a timely trip back to the 1960s and the origins of the Marvel/DC rivalry. Whereas DC characters such as Superman, Batman and Wonder Woman were mythic, optimistic and extraordinary, Marvel heroes like Spider-Man, Hulk, the X-Men and Daredevil had relatable problems (teen angst, financial difficulties, blindness etc) and often found their powers more of a curse than a gift. Industry luminaries shed light on those contrasting visions in a tale that is just as colourful and astonishing as the escapades of their characters.

DOCUMENTARY Witch Tuesday 11.00pm Radio 4

Folklore's image of a pointy-hatted sorceress on a broomstick may still loom large in popular culture, but presenter India Rakusen is keen to discover what it means to be a witch now. Is it a matter of female empowerment and identity? An act of resistance? Or is communing with nature the attraction? In this entertaining series opener, Rakusen joins sisters celebrating the Beltane festival in their back garden, before considering where our childhood fascination with magic goes and why the 1996 film The Craft struck a chord with teens. The whole series is on BBC Sounds from 30 May. JA

DOCUMENTARY The Boy in the Peking Hotel

Monday 11.30am Radio 4

The photograph above was taken in Beijing – Peking, as it was then referred to – in the mid-1960s and shows an English schoolboy called Kim Gordon. In this remarkable programme, Kim, now 65, recounts how his communist parents chose to relocate to China before falling foul of Mao Tse-tung's Cultural Revolution. The family ended up being held captive in a hotel room for two years – an experience that almost defies belief but on which Gordon looks back with a matter-of-factness that only adds to the programme's power. SIMON O'HAGAN

AMBRIDGE DIARY The Archers

Sunday–Friday 7.00pm Radio 4

Jazzier (Ryan Kelly, above) may have mellowed enough to be set to marry Tracy, but his stag do was never going to be a sedate affair, and there are sore heads at the cricket the day after, leading to flared tempers and controversy. Elsewhere, Helen's in shock when an unexpected visitor turns up at Bridge Farm, Brian makes a surprising discovery and Adam faces a dilemma. DAVID CRAWFORD

Up Front with Simon Jordan

PICK OF THE WEEK

The former Crystal Palace chairman-turned-radio provocateur knows how sport works, but his ego is so dominant he can never resist answering his own questions, not least when discussing the pampering of the modern player with Graeme Souness. He leaps in less with ex-boxer Tony Bellew, though, as he has the layman's respect for anybody who volunteers to be hurt. This series will improve when a guest tells Jordan to shut up. It's only what he would say. DAVID HEPWORTH

LIFE AFTER 9/11

Rosamund Pike and Hugh Laurie shine in a new drama of secrets and lies

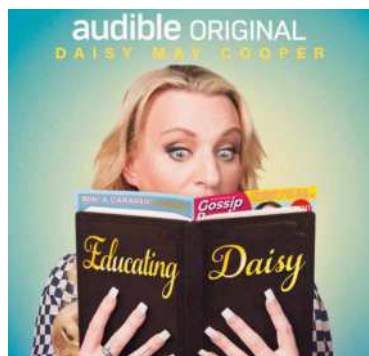

DRAMA

People Who Knew Me

Rosamund Pike is based. The adaptation opens with news reports of 9/11 and a man desperately trying to contact his wife, before hitting us with that line. It's the first in a letter that 41-year-old

"People who knew me think I'm dead" is the memorable first line of the novel by Kim Hooper on which this complex, poignant drama starring

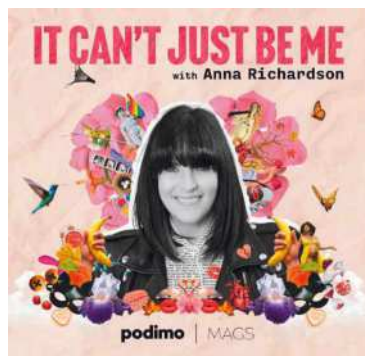

Connie Prynne in LA is writing to a younger woman called Emily back in New York 14 years later. Connie has been diagnosed with cancer and wants to make amends with a past she left for dead. Writer Daniella Isaacs peels back the layers of the awkward truth of a woman using a terrorist attack to flee a difficult situation, and a flawed, damaged character emerges. The drama benefits from a binaural sound design – and Hugh Laurie as a laconic fellow cancer patient. DAVID CRAWFORD

BOOKS

Educating Daisy

"This is gonna be absolute carnage," cackles Daisy May Cooper as she launches into her first podcast. The six-part series sees the star and co-creator of This Country invite celebrity friends, including Tim Key and Diane Morgan, to recommend their favourite novel to this very reluctant reader. The host's lack of knowledge may annoy literature lovers but fans will enjoy Cooper's frankness – and eruptions into hearty laughter make her a hugely endearing focus. EMMA SIMMONDS

RELATIONSHIPS

It Can't Just Be Me

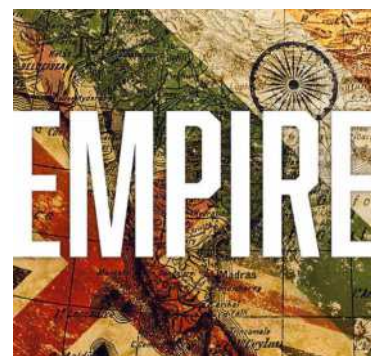

The world is more at ease with sex and sexuality than it was in 2016, when the full frontal nudity in C4's dating game show Naked Attraction first appeared. The show's presenter Anna Richardson has played a big part in removing the shame and taboos, and her new podcast continues the important work in a cosier format. She takes on the old-fashioned role of agony aunt to discuss listeners' sexual, romantic or friendship problems with guest celebrities and mental health professionals. FIONA HUGHES

Let's Not Be Kidding with Gavin Crawford

There was a time when Gavin Crawford's mother was his best friend – "incredibly funny, fun to be around, an endless supply of ridiculous comedy" – but then dementia set in. In making this podcast, Canadian comedian Crawford tries to remember how she was, while detailing "harrowing and hilarious things" from the eight or nine years of her mental incapacity. A fresh and entertaining take on an issue that's part of so many people's lives. SIMON O'HAGAN

HISTORY

Empire

Anita Anand and William Dalrymple are the ebullient hosts of this splendid series about the rise and fall of empires. First up is the British in India, beginning with the founding of the East India Company and followed by episodes on the Raj, mutiny and massacre, Gandhi, Independence, Partition and beyond. Thoroughly absorbing and comprehensive (there are four episodes alone on the murky saga of the Koh-i-Noor Diamond), it's a show that demands to be heard. JEREMY ASPINALL

KIDS' DRAMA Badger and the Blitz

From Fun Kids comes a ten-part children's drama inspired by a real government directive: in 1939, with war looming, many Britons followed advice to have their pets put down. Some 750,000 animals may have died. In Richard Turley and Darren Francis's terrific adventure, 11-year-old Londoner Jack (played by Francis's son Devon) is on a mission to save Badger, his staffie. The narrative also explains everything to young listeners about bomb sites, evacuations and air raids. After Life's Kerry Godliman narrates. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

DOCUMENTARY Believe in Magic

When Megan Bhari, a British teenager with a brain tumour, started a charity in 2012 granting wishes to sick children, she became an inspirational figure to thousands and won the support of boy band One Direction. But something didn't add up, and host Jamie Bartlett joins parents-turned-amateur detectives exploring this dark tale with more than one twist. It's perfect podcast fodder, with contributions from both passionate supporters and critics – plus an ethical dilemma at its heart.

CAROLINE FROST

JAMES MAY In this episode, James May, currently on the road in Amazon's Grand Tour, tells Kelly-Anne Taylor about the TV that made him the man he is today and how he uses his remote to support his local pub. He also gives us the real story of life on the road with Clarkson and Hammond – and reveals how his unexpectedly reckless driving in the current season of The Grand Tour landed him in a Scandinavian A&E.

POLITICS Pod Save the UK

Following the success of Pod Save America, we can now enjoy its companion show. Every Thursday, comedian Nish Kumar and journalist Coco Khan, together with special guests such as the Head of Politics at Surrey University, Amelia Hadfield, and Labour MP Clive Lewis, cover different topics from British politics. The duo's tongue-in-cheek comments keep the tone light while they tackle weighty subjects such as the monarchy. It's both educational and entertaining.

MAJA SKOMOROWSKA

One man's eccentric tours of London have me transfixed

AUTHOR AND FILM-MAKER John Rogers posts videos of his walks around London on his YouTube channel. He's been doing it for years. TV could never do what Rogers's channel does because a lot of the things he points his camera at are either far from conventionally picturesque or were destroyed many years ago. One time he goes looking for traces of the old wall around London, which has a habit of disappearing into the lobbies of modern hotels or behind the hoardings of building sites. Another, he follows the path of the River Brent either side of the North Circular road and comes across quite a few rats.

Some London tourists have to see things to believe in them. Others are quite happy to know that things were once there to be seen. That's why the best bits of Rogers's films are when he points the camera at his own face, which has a Tolkien twinkle to it, and speaks warmly of rivers that are lost, buildings that were ploughed under long ago, of fenlands and marshlands that once lay under all those coffee shops and sandwich bars – and the secret alignments of the ghost city that still lie a few feet beneath the pavements of the modern metropolis.

MUCH OF WHAT'S he's come to talk about has gone, thanks to the Great Fire, the Blitz and the unquenchable greed of developers. But that is a small matter for those of us who find it strangely enthralling to be standing in a place where something formerly stood. We thrill to Rogers's revelation that Bunhill Fields, which is where William Blake and Daniel Defoe are laid in earth, was formerly "bone hill" and that there is a pub near Holborn station where the body of Oliver Cromwell was once kept in a cellar overnight. The most powerful version of London isn't always visible, but it's something we can imagine. If you find Rogers as inspiring as many already do, you'll sooner or later be following in his footsteps.

Visit youtube.com/@JohnRogersWalks for Rogers's channel. For David's pick of the week, Up Front with Simon Jordan, see opposite page

Paul O'Grady Stands Up for Liverpool

6.00am/11.00am/5.00pm
Radio 4 Extra

The death of Paul O'Grady at the end of March shocked and saddened the broadcasting world and beyond. Now comes a chance to hear a programme from 2012 in which O'Grady (above) showcases a celebration of the Scouse humour phenomenon. It takes in everyone from Arthur Askey to John Bishop, via Robb Wilton and Alexei Sayle. And we can thrill again to a momentous meeting: Ricky Tomlinson interviewing Ken Dodd in 2007. Some would rate this the comic equivalent of Oprah talking to Harry and Meghan.

Slow Radio: We're Going Deptford Market

11.30pm Radio 3
In a departure from the natural noise of crashing waves and creaking glaciers that make up the bulk of Slow Radio entries, this episode features sounds recorded throughout a typical day at Deptford Market, interspersed with songs inspired by the area. This vibrant corner of south-east London offers familiar but no less fascinating noises, as snatches of conversation along the length and breadth of the market blend with music, barking and street preaching. Kentish greengrocers, Sikh carpet sellers and Caribbean cosmetic specialists are among the characters selling their wares at the stalls, while West African women haggle over the price of fish. It adds up to an immersive, urban experience.

TOM GOULDING

Between the Ears: Secrets of the Scottish Rainforest

6.45pm Radio 3
By way of a warm-up to Deptford Market (above), another glorious sound world, but this one of a rather different nature as the Scottish Makar Kathleen Jamie explores a temperate rainforest on the Atlantic coastline near the Sound of Mull. The poems she writes as a result of the experience – under the title The Green Room – tell the story of these ancient woodlands, and there are also contributions from crofter Alasdair Firth and local RSPB warden Izzy Baker. 7.30 Drama on 3: Black Water

A translation by David Tushingham of German writer Roland Schimmelpfennig's 2014 play Das schwarze Wasser (Black Water), about two sets of young people marked by contrasting backgrounds and expectations of what adult life will bring. One is a group of the children of Turkish workers, the other young middle-class Germans. Their paths have never crossed, but one warm night they all climb the fence of a forbidden swimming pool. The play maps out the complex relationships among class, expectations, education, family history, relationships and destiny, with a poetic script matched to Simon Slater's original score.

TODAY'S CHOICES

The Essay: Charles Aznavour in Five Songs

10.45pm Radio 3

The worldwide hit that Charles Aznavour (above) had with She in 1974 was such that it tends to obscure – at least in anglophone eyes – the extent of the French singer/songwriter and actor's wider cultural impact. Ahead of next year's centenary of his birth in 1924, this week-long series of essays celebrates his greatness in five songs (She not among them), starting tonight with writer Muriel Zagha's very personal take on Emmenez-moi (Take Me Away), its message of longing for a better life echoing not just Aznavour's sense of displacement but that of Zagha's own father. Enlightening and uplifting. SIMON O'HAGAN

Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3

On 14 May 1940 the Luftwaffe bombed Rotterdam, destroying the Dutch city's historic centre, including its newly built concert hall. The rebuilt hall, De Doelen, was opened in 1966, and every May since 1990, when Bernard Haitink began the tradition to commemorate the attack's 50th anniversary, the Rotterdam Philharmonic Orchestra has performed Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony there, marking, in its current CEO's words, "both the drama of devastation and the power of reconstruction". This year's performance was conducted by the RPhO's chief conductor, the Israeli-born Barenboim protégé Lahav Shani. MARK PAPPENHEIM

TODAY'S CHOICES

One to One

9.30am Radio 4

Last week Great Pottery Throwdown's Keith Brymer Jones (above) quizzed ex-serviceman Craig Mealing about PTSD and the inability to cry. This time, the lachrymose potter sits down with psychotherapist Susie Orbach. She doesn't give much away about her own need for tissues but she does say she is interested in why people well up in moments of triumph – in sports, say, or when lovers are reunited. Or someone makes a nice piece of pottery, perhaps? You can hear Brymer Jones choking back the tears as he agrees that his own famous propensity for welling up is his way of letting people know that he is aware of their effort and skill. FIONA HUGHES

The Documentary: Metaleurop: A Stain on France

9.30am/8.05pm
BBC World Service

Evvin-Malmaison, a commune in France's industrial north-east, has an unenviable reputation. Over decades its ground has become so polluted with lead that parents have stopped their children from playing outside. People fear to drink the water. It was here that the Metaleurop Foundry brought jobs to the area, but the result is a scandal that France is only now starting to comprehend. As campaigners are demanding a €558m state clean-up fund, who bears responsibility for the damage? And to what extent was it covered up? TOM GOULDING

TODAY'S CHOICES

The Beatles at the BBC

8.00pm Radio 4 Extra
The Beatles in their chrysalis phase is a wondrous thing, and that's what this archive hour, presented by Ken Bruce and first aired in 2013, captures so thrillingly. Amid the tumult of their breakthrough year of 1963 they somehow managed to put together a 15-week series for BBC radio called Pop Go the Beatles, clips from which – a mix of chat, live performances, and charming listener requests – form a big part of the programme. The way it transports us back in time, to a moment when John, Paul, George and Ringo were pretty much inventing popular culture, is extraordinary. For more Beatles – somehow we can never get enough of them – see The Frosted Tapes on Radio 4 Extra on Friday (a Choice on page 126). SIMON O'HAGAN

History's Secret Heroes

11.30am Radio 4
Helena Bonham Carter is quite a heavyweight for an enterprise of this kind. She will recount stories of people whose exploits during the Second World War may never have made the headlines or history books, but whose courage is worthy of greater recognition. It certainly sounds intriguing, starting with an American spy called Virginia Hall, who worked as part of the Special Operations Executive in occupied France. We know enough about those to whom statues have been erected. But we can never get enough secret history. HAYDON BRIDGE

TODAY'S CHOICES

Unite

6.30pm Radio 4
Piloted in 2020, Unite is perhaps the ultimate culture clash comedy. The original premise had Sarf London socialist Tony (Mark Steel) moving in with his girlfriend Imogen (Claire Skinner, above), an upper-middle-class property developer. Their banter is perhaps summed up by Steel's despairing, "Wine and nibbles! What have I become?" But there's more. The couple's sons – Oxford-educated Gideon (Ivo Graham) and would-be "rude boy" Ashley (Steel's real-life son Eliot) – are now also forced to live together, and their barbed exchanges provide the witty bedrock. Series 2 suggests the concept still has some mileage. Tonight sickly Tony wrestles with his conscience when Imogen secures him private health care. And Ashley upsets the apple cart by dating the course leader at his gender politics class. Comedy for our turbulent times. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

Archive on 4: Kissinger's Century

8.00pm Radio 4 Extra
This history-spanning interview with the former US Secretary of State was broadcast last year and is repeated in the week of his 100th birthday. Centre stage is his game-changing realpolitik approach to foreign policy under Presidents Nixon and Ford which led to détente with the Soviet Union and closer ties to Mao's China. Other areas interviewer James Naughtie covers include the end of the Vietnam War, the secret mass bombing of Cambodia, and the military coup in Chile. It is an enthralling hour of conversation, with Kissinger's musings on Trump, Putin and Ukraine especially incisive. JEREMY ASPINALL

10.45 The Essay: Charles Aznavour in Five Songs

4/5. Series in which the life and musical prowess of Charles Aznavour are distilled in five songs. Author Paul French explores The Old Fashioned Way, the English-language version of his song Les plaisirs démodés (1972). Aznavour sang it on his BBC Special in 1973, when it resonated with an audience nostalgic for times past in what was a difficult year of social strife in Britain. The single cracked the Top 40 in the autumn 1973 and had staying power on the chart.

11.30 Unclassified

Elizabeth Alker shares highlights from Unclassified Live Curiouser and Curiouser, a concert recorded on 19 May at the Queen Elizabeth Hall in London and headlined by genre-defying Welsh singer/songwriter Cate Le Bon, whose concert here with the BBC Concert Orchestra includes the world premiere of Meet the Man. Also on stage with music created specially for the event are London-based composer and sound artist Hinako Omori – who combines orchestral textures and ethereal electronic soundscapes – and Pakistani-American composer and drummer Qasim Naqvi, whose sound is marked by complex polyrhythms and pulsating drones.

TODAY'S CHOICES

The Frost Tapes

8.00pm Radio 4 Extra
Countless interviews with the Beatles means we are familiar with the band's sarcasm and counterculture politics. But when it's the late great David Frost asking the questions, the appeal is as much about the interrogator as the interviewee. In this episode of The Frost Tapes – a series of long-buried interviews presented by his son Wilfred that first aired last year – the late broadcaster's charm proves a match for the mop-tops' wry humour as he beguiles recollections out of the Fab Four, including the story of George Harrison's first guitar and John Lennon's love of Hamburg. Frost also probes Paul McCartney's working-class roots and Ringo Starr's big break when he replaced Pete Best as drummer. TOM GOULDING

Fit for Work

11.00am Radio 4
With his customary incisiveness, documentary-maker Jolyon Jenkins calls to account the Department for Work and Pensions for administering "one of the biggest social policy failures of the last 20 or 30 years". Announcing the Conservative decision to reduce sickness benefit pay-outs, Social Security Secretary Peter Lilley said, "I'm closing down the something-for-nothing society." Jenkins finds that down the years all three parties pursued a policy that "all parties now consider to have been a disaster". The first recorded case of suicide following a failure to pass the DWP's almost inflexible work capability assessment came in 2010. Hundreds more cases followed. It's the cruel misguidedness of the system that now seems astounding. DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

11.00 FM Fit for Work

RT New series. 1/3. For 30 years, governments have tried to get disabled people into work by toughening up benefit rules. Part of the motivation has been to cut the welfare bill, but it's also been framed as an attempt to stop the disabled "linguishing" on benefits. As Jolyon Jenkins discovers, the policy has had tragic consequences, particularly for people with mental illness. They have felt coerced and pressured, because the Department for Work and Pensions has deemed them fit for work. Producer Jolyon Jenkins

BBC Local Radio

Face behind the voice

Age 50
Current job
Presenter of Greatest Hits
Radio's Rhythm of the Night (Fri/Sat, 10pm-1am).

"We focus on three brilliant decades of music – the 70s, 80s and 90s. If you've had a stressful week and you need a break, we take you back to the music you grew up with."

CV Born in south-west London. "Desperate to get into radio, I was working in a clothes shop by day and DJing wherever I could at night." In 1991 he began working for charity radio station Radio Cracker, along with Tim Vine, "who was trying to get into comedy". His first professional radio job was with Power FM, 1996-2004, then he became head of music at Choice FM. From 2006, while programming for MTV, he also presented for Capital FM. "Once radio's in your blood, it's in your blood." From 2009 to 2012 he worked for Ministry of Sound Radio, while also DJing around the world. "I set myself the target of getting a stamp on every page of my passport, which I did!" For the past two years he has been a mentor for Media for All, dedicated to improving opportunities in the media industry for people from diverse backgrounds.

Social media – yes or no? "Yes, sparingly. I find myself mainly on Instagram nowadays. I deleted my Twitter account a couple of years ago because I was spending too much time getting annoyed. I've just started it again. But I try to keep it as positive as I can."

Best moments "When I worked at Power FM on the south coast, I got to know Craig David. He would wander in with a track he'd just finished and say, 'Shall we see how this sounds?' I got to play all the hit singles from his first album Born to Do It. I pinch myself!"

Worst moment "It was a beautiful Sunday morning. I woke up feeling delicate – I'd helped a friend of mine move house, then had a few celebratory drinks. I checked my phone – several missed calls from my station boss, asking why I wasn't on the radio...I'd totally

Off air Lives in Surrey with his partner Rachelle, their cat Merlin, and two ducks, Romeo and Juliet – "They never leave each other's sides." First radio memory "My mum took me to a Kenny Everett road show. I got a Capital Radio pen and key ring. From then on, I used to pretend I was on the radio, playing songs and jingles."

Favorite broadcasters "Broadway Bill Lee on WCBS in New York – he's one of the greatest music radio presenters. Incredible energy. Pete Tong is still at the forefront of what he does. Simon Mayo has a brilliant relationship with listeners. And we've got this new guy called Ken Bruce, who's settling in nicely!" Ambition/Dream job "I'm a little bit of an aviation geek. I've had a few flying lessons over the years. Maybe, when I've got more time, I'll look into getting the paperwork."

Secret skills "I used to be the voice of the New Year's Eve fireworks in London, counting down to midnight." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

BBC Radio Scotland

Face behind the voice Des Paul Greatest Hits Radio

Age 50
Current job
Presenter of Greatest Hits
Radio's Rhythm of the Night (Fri/Sat, 10pm-1am).

"We focus on three brilliant decades of music – the 70s, 80s and 90s. If you've had a stressful week and you need a break, we take you back to the music you grew up with."

CV Born in south-west London. "Desperate to get into radio, I was working in a clothes shop by day and DJing wherever I could at night." In 1991 he began working for charity radio station Radio Cracker, along with Tim Vine, "who was trying to get into comedy". His first professional radio job was with Power FM, 1996-2004, then he became head of music at Choice FM. From 2006, while programming for MTV, he also presented for Capital FM. "Once radio's in your blood, it's in your blood." From 2009 to 2012 he worked for Ministry of Sound Radio, while also DJing around the world. "I set myself the target of getting a stamp on every page of my passport, which I did!" For the past two years he has been a mentor for Media for All, dedicated to improving opportunities in the media industry for people from diverse backgrounds.

Social media – yes or no? "Yes, sparingly. I find myself mainly on Instagram nowadays. I deleted my Twitter account a couple of years ago because I was spending too much time getting annoyed. I've just started it again. But I try to keep it as positive as I can."

Best moments "When I worked at Power FM on the south coast, I got to know Craig David. He would wander in with a track he'd just finished and say, 'Shall we see how this sounds?' I got to play all the hit singles from his first album Born to Do It. I pinch myself!"

Worst moment "It was a beautiful Sunday morning. I woke up feeling delicate – I'd helped a friend of mine move house, then had a few celebratory drinks. I checked my phone – several missed calls from my station boss, asking why I wasn't on the radio...I'd totally

Off air Lives in Surrey with his partner Rachelle, their cat Merlin, and two ducks, Romeo and Juliet – "They never leave each other's sides."

First radio memory "My mum took me to a Kenny Everett road show. I got a Capital Radio pen and key ring. From then on, I used to pretend I was on the radio, playing songs and jingles."

Favorite broadcasters "Broadway Bill Lee on WCBS in New York – he's one of the greatest music radio presenters. Incredible energy. Pete Tong is still at the forefront of what he does. Simon Mayo has a brilliant relationship with listeners. And we've got this new guy called Ken Bruce, who's settling in nicely!"

Ambition/Dream job "I'm a little bit of an aviation geek. I've had a few flying lessons over the years. Maybe, when I've got more time, I'll look into getting the paperwork." Secret skills "I used to be the voice of the New Year's Eve fireworks in London, counting down to midnight." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY contribution to some of the biggest pop records and soundtracks of the past 40 years. As well as being a founding member of Art of Noise, Anne's string arrangements and keyboard playing can be heard on hits by ABC, Dollar, Frankie Goes to Hollywood, a-ha, Electronic, Wham!, George Michael, Will Young and Lloyd Cole and the Commotions. Art of Noise earned a Grammy for their remake of Peter Gunn and Anne has been credited with reinventing the pop career of Tom Jones when he was invited to appear on their version of Prince's Kiss. Here Anne shares the stories of some of these recordings.

BBC Radio Ulster

Face behind the voice Des Paul Greatest Hits Radio

Age 50
Current job
Presenter of Greatest Hits
Radio's Rhythm of the Night (Fri/Sat, 10pm-1am).

"We focus on three brilliant decades of music – the 70s, 80s and 90s. If you've had a stressful week and you need a break, we take you back to the music you grew up with."
CV Born in south-west London. "Desperate to get into radio, I was working in a clothes shop by day and DJing wherever I could at night." In 1991 he began working for charity station Radio Cracker, along with Tim Vine, "who was trying to get into comedy". His first professional radio job was with Power FM, 1996-2004, then he became head of music at Choice FM. From 2006, while programming for MTV, he also presented for Capital FM. "Once radio's in your blood, it's in your blood." From 2009 to 2012 he worked for Ministry of Sound Radio, while also DJing around the world. "I set myself the target of getting a stamp on every page of my passport, which I did!"

For the past two years he has been a mentor for Media for All, dedicated to improving opportunities in the media industry for people from diverse backgrounds.
Social media – yes or no? "Yes, sparingly. I find myself mainly on Instagram nowadays. I deleted my Twitter account a couple of years ago because I was spending too much time getting annoyed. I've just started it again. But I try to keep it as positive as I can."
Best moments "When I worked at Power FM on the south coast, I got to know Craig David. He would wander in with a track he'd just finished and say, 'Shall we see how this sounds?' I got to play all the hit singles from his first album Born to Do It. I pinch myself!"
Worst moment "It was a beautiful Sunday morning. I woke up feeling delicate – I'd helped a friend of mine move house, then had a few celebratory drinks. I checked my phone – several missed calls from my station boss, asking why I wasn't on the radio...I'd totally

Off air Lives in Surrey with his partner Rachelle, their cat Merlin, and two ducks, Romeo and Juliet – "They never leave each other's sides."
First radio memory "My mum took me to a Kenny Everett road show. I got a Capital Radio pen and key ring. From then on, I used to pretend I was on the radio, playing songs and jingles."
Favorite broadcasters "Broadway Bill Lee on WCBS in New York – he's one of the greatest music radio presenters. Incredible energy. Pete Tong is still at the forefront of what he does. Simon Mayo has a brilliant relationship with listeners. And we've got this new guy called Ken Bruce, who's settling in nicely!"
Ambition/Dream job "I'm a little bit of an aviation geek. I've had a few flying lessons over the years. Maybe, when I've got more time, I'll look into getting the paperwork."
Secret skills "I used to be the voice of the New Year's Eve fireworks in London, counting down to midnight." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

BBC Radio Wales

Face behind the voice Des Paul Greatest Hits Radio

Age 50
Current job
Presenter of Greatest Hits
Radio's Rhythm of the Night (Fri/Sat, 10pm-1am).

"We focus on three brilliant decades of music – the 70s, 80s and 90s. If you've had a stressful week and you need a break, we take you back to the music you grew up with."

CV Born in south-west London. "Desperate to get into radio, I was working in a clothes shop by day and DJing wherever I could at night." In 1991 he began working for charity radio station Radio Cracker, along with Tim Vine, "who was trying to get into comedy". His first professional radio job was with Power FM, 1996-2004, then he became head of music at Choice FM. From 2006, while programming for MTV, he also presented for Capital FM. "Once radio's in your blood, it's in your blood." From 2009 to 2012 he worked for Ministry of Sound Radio, while also DJing around the world. "I set myself the target of getting a stamp on every page of my passport, which I did!" For the past two years he has been a mentor for Media for All, dedicated to improving opportunities in the media industry for people from diverse backgrounds.

Social media – yes or no? "Yes, sparingly. I find myself mainly on Instagram nowadays. I deleted my Twitter account a couple of years ago because I was spending too much time getting annoyed. I've just started it again. But I try to keep it as positive as I can."

Best moments "When I worked at Power FM on the south coast, I got to know Craig David. He would wander in with a track he'd just finished and say, 'Shall we see how this sounds?' I got to play all the hit singles from his first album Born to Do It. I pinch myself!"

Worst moment "It was a beautiful Sunday morning. I woke up feeling delicate – I'd helped a friend of mine move house, then had a few celebratory drinks. I checked my phone – several missed calls from my station boss, asking why I wasn't on the radio...I'd totally

Off air Lives in Surrey with his partner Rachelle, their cat Merlin, and two ducks, Romeo and Juliet – "They never leave each other's sides."

First radio memory "My mum took me to a Kenny Everett road show. I got a Capital Radio pen and key ring. From then on, I used to pretend I was on the radio, playing songs and jingles."

avourite broadcasters "Broadway Bill Lee on WCBS in New York – he's one of the greatest music radio presenters. Incredible energy. Pete Tong is still at the forefront of what he does. Simon Mayo has a brilliant relationship with listeners. And we've got this new guy called Ken Bruce, who's settling in nicely!"

Ambition/Dream job "I'm a little bit of an aviation geek. I've had a few flying lessons over the years. Maybe, when I've got more time, I'll look into getting the paperwork."

Secret skills "I used to be the voice of the New Year's Eve fireworks in London, counting down to midnight." DAVID MCGILLIVRAY

SMALL BUT DANGEROUS

Microbes in their trillions have played an unwitting but key role in history, says Britain's go-to germ guy
Dr Jonathan Kennedy

Book of the Week: Pathogenesis
Mon–Fri 9.45am (FM), 12.30am Radio 4

DR JONATHAN KENNEDY is one of Britain's leading experts on germs. Reader in politics and global health at Queen Mary University of London, Kennedy is a fount of eye-popping statistics when it comes to microbes, pathogens and pandemics.

"If you were to weigh all the bacteria on the planet, and all the humans on the planet, the bacteria would be over 1,000 times heavier than all the humans," he says, barely hitting his statistical stride. "And if you took all the viruses on the planet and put them end to end, they would reach for 100 million light years."

He laughs. "Just the size of this microbial world that's invisible to us is almost beyond the comprehension of our little minds."

Kennedy's fascinating new book, Pathogenesis: How Germs Made History, argues that the impact of bacteria and disease has shaped world events far more than we have realised. "We often think in terms of great men, and to a lesser extent great women, being the driving force of historical change," he says. "If we're on the left, we might think also about thousands or sometimes millions of oppressed people rising up and making change. I guess what I'm proposing is not just history from below, but history from way, way below. So rather than millions of humans getting together and changing history, it's trillions and trillions of microbes unwittingly acting as the driving force."

The book teems with examples. An epidemic of either typhus or smallpox ravaged Athens during the fifth century BC, which "undermined Athens's capacity to fight against the Spartans and had a profound impact on the course and outcome of the Peloponnesian War". A number of plagues beginning in AD65 very possibly damaged the might of the Roman empire to an extent that contributed to its eventual fall. "If we look back at history, you see that the past is punctuated by these devastating pandemics," he says. "They kill millions of people. They sometimes bring whole civilisations crashing down. But they can also be really exciting times as well, in the medium and long term, because they create space for new ideas, and for new societies to emerge."

Elsewhere in the book, Kennedy considers how the eruption of a volcano in Indonesia exacerbated the Black Death, and turns his gaze to everyone from Swedish

'Pandemics create space for new ideas and societies'

JONATHAN KENNEDY

Neanderthals to the mysterious "Cheddar Man". Alongside all this ancient history, the Covid-19 pandemic provides a contemporary context. He was inspired to write the book during lockdown: his wife was pregnant, and "I found myself at home with lots of time on my hands, which I didn't have prior to that. Also, within a couple of weeks it had become a cliché in the news cycle to say that this was an unprecedented, extraordinary event. I knew that this wasn't the case."

IN FACT, KENNEDY says Covid-19 proved that we are living in "a new golden age for microbes and pathogens. The massive population growth we've seen in the last 50 years, the incursions on animal habitats, the rise in industrial-scale factory farming and the ease and speed at which people can move around the world now – these have created the perfect conditions for pandemics to emerge and spread. This is a reason to be scared, but it's also important to look back at history and learn the lessons where we've done well dealing with pandemics, and when we've done not so well."

GAME CHANGERS
Left: a Chinese street being disinfected against Covid-19 in 2021 and (inset) the Yersinia pestis plague bacteria, which caused the Black Death, under the microscope are reasons to be cheerful, not least when considering the medical advances made in the past century. "It's really remarkable how much better we are at diagnosing, preventing and treating infectious diseases, and that's probably going to accelerate over the next few decades," says Kennedy. "We're always going to be in this uneasy battle with microbes; our bodies are absolutely teeming with microbial life, and some of them help us and some of them harm us. We're in a pretty precarious position, but if we can get the science and the politics right, then we can put ourselves in the best position to face this really quite stark existential challenge." GRAEME THOMSON

As well as applying pathological science to history, Pathogenesis is a political book. In his day job studying public health, Kennedy has seen how disease feeds on social iniquities. "You start to realise that there have been all these fantastic improvements in medical technology over the last 50 years, yet you still have millions of people, mainly poor people in poor countries, who are dying from diseases that are either treatable or preventable. We saw during the Covid pandemic that people living in the poorest parts of the country were dying at a much higher rate than people in the wealthiest parts. The pandemic would have been so much less devastating if we had previously dealt with some of the massive social issues that we have here."

Despite all this germ-associated gloom, there

Literary scandal

Revisit 1920s Malaysia with Somerset Maugham

THE HOUSE OF DOORS TAN SWAN ENG

Book at Bedtime Mon–Fri
10.45pm Radio 4

The author of the Booker-shortlisted The Garden of Evening Mists returns with a fictionalised version of a true-life 1921 scandal. The Proudlock case rocked society and was turned into a short story by W Somerset Maugham, who appears as the main character in The House of Doors (Canongate, £20), travelling colonial Malaysia in search of inspiration for his next writings. Hiding from his own demons, he pulls back the curtain on his companions' secrets in this tale of love and betrayal in high-society Penang.

NORMAN FOSTER EDITED BY FRÉDÉRIC MIGAYROU

The Sky's the Limit?
Monday 4.00pm Radio 4

One of the world's most renowned architects, Norman Foster has had an illustrious career since he founded his own practice in the early 1960s. His marriage of imagination, physics and engineering has transformed the landscapes surrounding his projects, and in conjunction with a new exhibition celebrating his career at the Pompidou Centre in Paris, the monograph Norman Foster (ACC Art Books, £50) explores over 80 of his projects alongside interviews, essays, sketches and photographs.

WOOL HUGH HOWEY

Silo available now Apple TV+

Not one for claustrophobes, Hugh Howey's dystopian sci-fi novel Wool (Penguin, £9.99), the first book in his Silo trilogy, takes place deep underground, where society has settled after the Earth's surface has become uninhabitable. Mechanic Juliette (played by Rebecca Ferguson in Apple TV+'s adaptation – see p8) goes against the status quo and threatens the governance of the Silo, where questioning of the rule of law is met with the ultimate punishment: being allowed outside. RHIANNON THOMAS

POM-POM CHEER LEADERS

Alliums' distinctive blooms come in pinks, purples and even whites – and are easy to grow, says Joe Swift over borders in a range of cool colours – from purples, through pinks to whites. Leeks, chives and onions are all alliums, and can each be very pretty if you let them flower.

The ornamental garden varieties, of which there are many, come in a particularly useful range of heights and sizes. The largest, as its name suggests, is A giganteum, with its unmissable 15cm-diameter blooms, whereas one of the smallest is the “round-headed leek” of A sphaerocephalon, with its deep maroon, egg-shaped drumsticks. Then there's A schubertii, which has fabulous flowers, rather like fireworks going off in your borders!

The most popular garden allium is A “Purple Sensation”. If you're looking for a classic, you can't go wrong with it. Its perfectly spherical, bright purple flowers last for ages and fade nicely, and it makes a particularly good cut flower, too. “Gladiator” is similar in colour yet, at around 1.2m tall, even more dramatic. Understandably, these are often planted at the back of a border, but try a few front-of-stage to help create drama and foreground.

My favourite white one is Allium nigrum (yes, nigrum means black. Don't ask me!). It's a chunky plant with solid stems, grey foliage and flattish flowerheads in late May.

The great thing about alliums is that they are easy to grow, and if they're happy in their spot they will naturalise and multiply – and clump up nicely to return year on year.

Joe Swift is a presenter on Gardeners' World, Fridays BBC2

HOW TO GROW

Alliums can be planted in the autumn as bulbs, which works out cheaper if you're planting in quantity. They can also be bought in pots now, ready to pop in where you want them. They like sun and good drainage, so add some grit if necessary.

If you don't want them to seed, snip off the flower head after flowering (they look great as a dried flower in a vase), or leave them dried in the border for ornamental value. Divide every three or four years in late summer, marking with a stick when they flower, so you remember where they are as they'll have died back by then.

BEGINNER'S GUIDE TO...

Tactile plants

Gardens should tickle all the senses. I like to get touchy-feely with plants and really get to know them. Kids love to touch plants, too, and this lot combine brilliantly with others in terms of sight, smell and sound if you want to make a complete sensory garden.

PLANTS WITH SOFT LEAVES

■ Lamb's ear (Stachys byzantina, above) This one has downy grey leaves that are silky to the touch. Grow it in sun and it's ideal for gravel gardens and softening edges of paving.

■ Silver sage (Salvia argentea) Most salvias are grown predominantly for their flowers, but this one has large silvery-white (Alice in Wonderland-type) leaves, covered in cotton-wool-like down, that are hard to resist.

■ Jerusalem sage (Phlomis fruticosa) Very soft, downy leaves – and a gentle yellow in summer. Don't cut it back until spring, as its dark silhouette looks great through the winter.

INTERESTING BARK AND STEMS FOR TEXTURE

■ Bark cherry (Prunus serrula)

A great tree for a small garden with lovely smooth, shiny, mahogany-coloured bark. Sure, peel a little off around the edges to reveal the shiniest bits – bet you can't keep your hands off it!

■ Bamboo There are many bamboos that develop lovely smooth canes as they mature. Snip off the lower leaves, which will make them stand more proudly, and also make the canes easier to access.

■ Paperbark maple (Acer griseum)

The clue is in the name: its tactile, dark-red bark peels – which gives it a lovely texture visually and looks great when backlit. Another good one for the small garden.

Succession

Monday 2.00am, 9.00pm Sky Atlantic

YOU MAY NOT want to live in the world of Succession. (In the words of one character, after all, “It’s like Jaws. If everyone in Jaws worked for Jaws.”) But a holiday there? Among the gleaming towers of Manhattan, elegant palazzi of the Italian Lakes, rarefied Cotswold country estates, and some of the finest hotels on Earth? That’s a rather more appealing prospect – and you don’t necessarily need to own a multinational media conglomerate, as the show’s Roy family do, to afford it.

As the drama concludes this week, then, here’s how to drop in on the Logan Roy lifestyle.

NEW YORK – DOWNTOWN AND UPSTATE

The Roy empire’s heart is the gleaming Manhattan skyscraper that houses its Waystar Royco offices – in real life some vacant spaces in One World Trade Center. You can’t get into the office areas (you’d have to be a pretty serious fan to want to), but at 417m “One WTC” is the tallest building in the western hemisphere and one of New York’s most popular tourist attractions.

Ideally, you’d overnight at one of the luxury hotels frequented by the programme’s characters: the Mandarin Oriental on Columbus Circle; the Pierre on East 61st Street; the Sheraton Times Square on Seventh Avenue; the Mark on East 77th Street; or the Plaza on Fifth Avenue, where you’ll recognise the rooms (Palm Court, Terrace Room, Grand Ballroom) in which the Roys sized up potential US presidents before simply picking the one they wanted.

There are some more affordable locations, too. Anyone can catch an exhibition or performance at arts venue the Shed (the setting for Kendall’s 40th birthday in season three; yes, the one with a walk-through re-creation of his mother’s birth canal). And the family gathering that opens season four was filmed at Peter McManus Café, an Irish bar on Seventh Avenue that claims to be New York’s oldest.

Want to escape the high-stakes, high-end pressure cooker of Manhattan? Head upstate to Six Flags Great Escape, in Queensbury, which doubles as Brightstar, the theme park owned by the Roys that hosts a birthday party in season two and is where we’re first introduced to Greg (vomiting in his dog costume) in season one.

TUSCAN GRANDEUR

You may have “done” Tuscany... but have you done it like a Roy? In season three, the siblings’ mother, Lady Caroline, gets married in this glorious corner of Italy. Though pricey, most of the venues and shoot locations are open to the public. The wedding itself takes place at the rambling mansion of Villa Cetinale, in Sovicille near Siena. It was built for Pope Alexander VII, so is naturally no place for a hen party: that happens nearby in the gorgeous (but always popular) medieval town of Cortona instead.

The Roys stay at Villa la Foce, near the spa town of Chianciano Terme (though Kendall opts for Villa Bonriposi in Legoli), and there are also cameos for spa village Bagno Vignoni, restaurant La Terrazza del Chiostro in Pienza, and (later in the series) Villa la Cassinella on Lake Como.

MEDIEVAL
Cortona in Tuscany was a location in season three of Succession

NORWEGIAN PEAKS

Season four sees the Roys touring slightly sinister “tech bro” Lukas Matsson’s home country – and it certainly looks good. Viewers may already be familiar with the Atlantic Ocean Road, scene of a memorable car chase in Bond film No Time to Die, and it truly is a fantastic drive as it sweeps and swoops over a collection of islets. You might also recognise the Juvet Landscape Hotel: this exquisite eco-resort near Valldal featured in Alex Garland’s spooky sci-fi flick Ex Machina.

Those who want to re-create the summit-on-a-summit where senior company members meet the Roys at the top of a mountain, should look to 715m Nesaksla, near Andalsnes. No need to hike: you can take the Romsdalen cable car up there – then dine in the scene-stealing Eggen Restaurant with its panoramic views of mountains and the sinuous River Rauma.

THE HIGH LIFE

Most Succession fans won’t be able to emulate the Roys’ extravagant lifestyle – but there are a few more affordable options...

season one

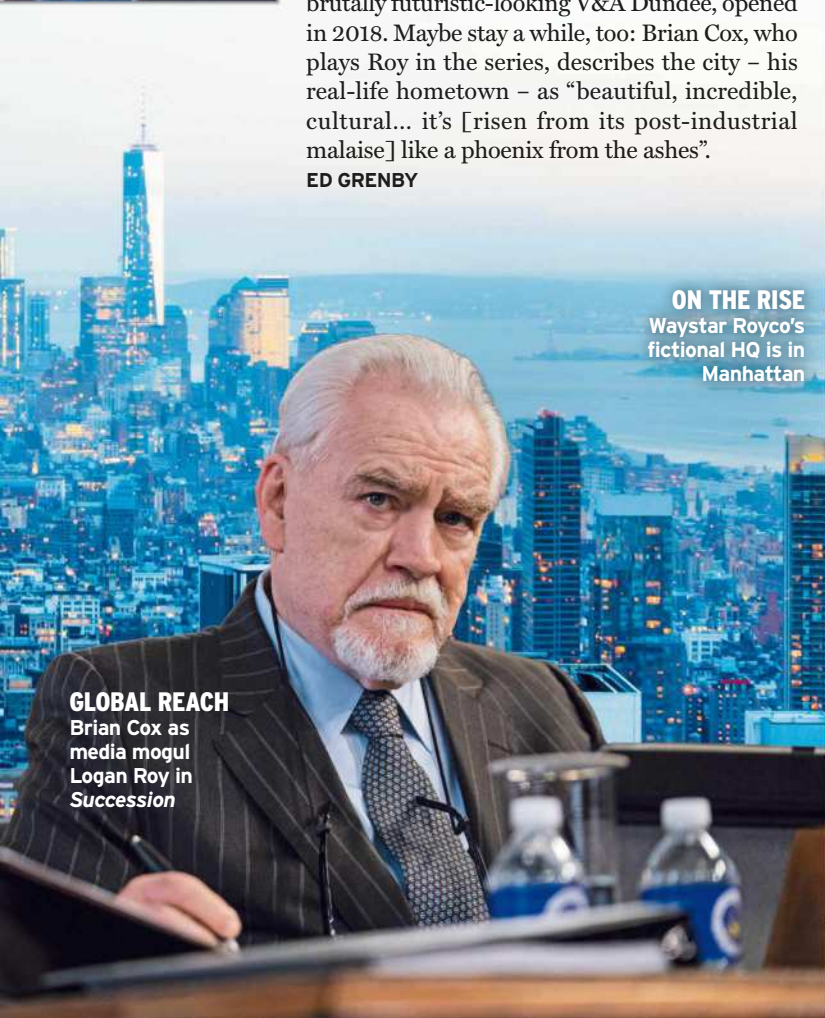

FROM THE COTSWOLDS TO DUNDEE

For the very hardest of hardcore fans only, you can actually get married on the spot where Shiv Roy ties the knot with Tom in season one: Eastnor Castle is a stately home, deer park, hotel and, yes, wedding venue sitting very pretty in the Malvern Hills Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty on the edge of the Cotswolds. (In the show it belongs to Lady Caroline; in reality to the descendants of the splendidly named Second Baron John Somers Cocks, who built it, in the mock-medieval style, 200 years ago.)

For a total style contrast, meanwhile, there's the Victoria and Albert Museum's Dundee outpost. When Logan Roy is honoured in his Scottish hometown during season two, it's at the brutally futuristic-looking V&A Dundee, opened in 2018. Maybe stay a while, too: Brian Cox, who plays Roy in the series, describes the city – his real-life hometown – as “beautiful, incredible, cultural... it's [risen from its post-industrial malaise] like a phoenix from the ashes”.

YOUR TRAVEL CHECKLIST

Off to Europe? Make sure you have valid documents. If you don't, give yourself plenty of time for replacements, says Paul Lewis

If you are planning a trip to Europe this year, there are two vital checks to do first...

PASSPORT

Since the UK left the EU, the validity of your passport to travel to the 27 EU states has changed. In the past, if it was valid when you left the UK you could use it to enter Europe. But now there are two other important conditions.

First, it must have at least three months' validity for the period after you return. So if you go away to

'If you need a new passport it could take ten weeks'

France for the whole of August, your passport must be valid until the end of November or you will be refused entry. Second, it is only valid from ten years since it was issued. In the past a UK passport that was renewed would be valid until ten years after the date at which the old one expired. So if you renewed your passport up to nine months before it ran out, then it would in fact be valid for over ten years. However, the EU will now only accept a passport as valid if it was renewed in the last ten years.

Check your passport: if you need a new one apply now (search gov.uk for "passport renewal"). The Government warns it could take ten weeks.

MEDICAL

To get medical help in EU countries you need a card called a Global Health Insurance Card or GHIC. This should ensure you get treatment on the same terms and at the same cost – usually free – as nationals of the country you are visiting. The GHIC replaces the former European card EHIC, but covers fewer countries, omitting Norway, Iceland and Liechtenstein, which are not in the EU. If you already have an old EHIC then you can use it until it expires.

GHICs are free – search "NHS GHIC" online. The Government says you should allow at least three weeks before you travel and there have been reports of longer delays. A GHIC is not a substitute for medical travel insurance.

Only use the gov.uk or nhs.uk websites to renew a passport or get a GHIC. Other websites will be scams.

RT MONEY PARTNER

UNLOCK THE VALUE OF YOUR HOME

Maximise your retirement income and achieve your goals by making the most of your home's equity

If you are approaching retirement or already enjoying it, you might be wondering how you will finance your long-awaited free time. If you're looking to boost your retirement income, equity release provides a flexible solution for accessing the money that's tied up in your home. Plus, the tax-free money you unlock is yours to enjoy spending, without the need to make monthly repayments.

To help you find out more, Radio Times has partnered with Age Partnership+, part of the UK's number one equity release adviser*. Their team are available to explore your options and tell you everything you need to know about equity release, including the effect on the amount of inheritance you can leave and if your entitlement to means-tested benefits could be affected now or in the future.

With a no-obligation personalised illustration they will help you understand the features and risks, and explain that equity release may involve a lifetime mortgage, which is secured against your property, or a home reversion plan. Equity release requires paying off any existing mortgage, and any money released, plus accrued interest would be repaid upon death or moving into long-term care. Your FREE Radio Times guide to equity release, written by RT's Paul Lewis, can help explain how equity release works, and if it could be right for you.

DICTIONARY CORNER

Phrase of the week Take the biscuit

To "take the biscuit", when it first appeared in the late 19th century, was to win or excel at something. Today, it has become an exclamation used when somebody has acted in a way that is especially annoying or surprising, and that tops everything else.

While we might assume that any expression involving a biscuit would be British, the earliest examples of it are actually from the US, where it's a variation on an earlier phrase "to take the cake", meaning to carry off the honours. This may have begun with the giving of a cake as a prize in a "cakewalk", a contest in graceful walking among enslaved black people in Southern plantations. By the 1880s, a biscuit had supplanted the cake as the reward in question, and a distinct note of irony began to creep in.

EDITED BY JANE HILL

I'M STICKING WITH 2

After all the letters in recent weeks about the departure of Ken Bruce from Radio 2, I would like to redress the balance and write in praise of Vernon Kay's new programme in Ken's old slot.

After listening to the first show (15 May), it's already clear to me that his easy manner and connection with the listener make him the ideal person to, as he put it, "fill big shoes".

I have been listening to Radio 2 since the late 90s and look forward to tuning in to him and the other presenters for many years to come.

To those who have left Radio 2 for the commercial stations with their limited playlists and annoying ad breaks: good luck to you. But I'm not going anywhere.

LOVE BIRDS

Painting Birds with Jim and Nancy Moir (Sunday Sky Arts) has been such a joy. Their relationship is lovely, and Jim's passion for painting is infectious. I've learnt so much – I'll definitely be trying his technique of sprinkling table salt on watercolour paints for a mottled effect. It's also been really nice to see stars such as Jools Holland (3 May) in his country home.

Episode four (10 May) was very affecting when they met one of my guitar heroes, Edwyn Collins. I was so touched by the way Jim spoke to Edwyn, who has lost the use of his right side following a stroke and has taught himself to draw and paint with his left hand – not pitying him, but celebrating his artwork and talking to him on the same level. Funny, informative, touching, beautiful TV.

WASTED TRIP

What a big disappointment Clive Myrie's Italian Road Trip (BBC2) is. Why do some "celebrities" have to have a go at making the specialties of a town or region? We do not watch a travel programme to see how clever the host is at making pasta or tiramisu! If Italy is Mr Myrie's favourite place, why not show us the local architecture and some history? I was amazed that, during the brief visit to Verona, we didn't see the wonderful arena, which must appeal to him, combining as it does opera and history. I also feel sorry for Catherine, his wife, who must be inundated with selfies!

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Time for a change of Focus

Women's professional football is becoming so popular and important, isn't it time to give the Women's Super League due recognition next season by having its own Football Focus (Saturday BBC1)? Although BBC TV does show live games and gives us highlights and analysis in The Women's Football Show (Sunday BBC1), the current version of Football Focus isn't long enough to preview all the leagues. On 13 May it dedicated about 20 minutes – a third of the programme – to the women's game, with discussion of the Premier League significantly curtailed.

There could be a poll on the BBC Sports app. Surely it's time for a change?

Ten Pound Poms (Sunday BBC1) is set, I think I can speak with some authority on the subject. While acknowledging that the portrayal of the migrant hostel was accurate, much else was not. Aside from the ludicrous Kate Thorne (Michelle Keegan) plot line, we have another example of 2023 sensibilities being imposed on a historical subject.

However, my main objection is to the portrayal of Australians. I do accept there were some who resented British migrants, but my experience was that, almost without exception, they were friendly and welcoming.

Michael Foreman

London W5

...As a trainee reporter in early-60s Australia I was often assigned to greet the latest groups of British new arrivals. Armed with lists of names, I would walk through the crowds looking for the Brown family of Birmingham or the Smiths of Sheffield, who had bravely set out to start new lives in an unknown country. So I was looking forward to Ten Pound Poms. But I was disappointed with the first episode and its grotesque caricatures.

There was certainly discrimination and prejudice in those days, but I know from experience that not all Aussies then were Pommy-bashers, and not all officials heartless.

BLUNDER WEED

Unfortunately, the "Sticky Grass", aka goosegrass or cleaver, recommended by Rachel de Thame (RT, 20 May) as a Wonder Weed, is not good for our gardens. You will be pulling it out for ever. If there was a Chelsea gold medal for a cunning plant, it would win!

The seeds are little green balls with minute sticky hairs. They cling/cleave to clothes and spread the plant everywhere. It climbs rampantly and smothers weaker plants. I agree with Rachel that brambles can be thuggish, but three cheers for the rest.

DOUZE POINTS!

The BBC pulled out all the stops for the Eurovision Song Contest Grand Final from Liverpool (13 May BBC1/Radio 2) and it was magnificent. That it was the best [and most-watched] ever was thanks to co-presenter Hannah Waddingham, who made it so entertaining from start to finish. She stole the thunder from Graham Norton, Alesha Dixon and Julia Sanina, and the BBC needs to have her back next year. She is a natural in front of the camera and her ability with languages, especially French, made her a joy to watch.

I HEARD THAT! PARDON?

Mondegreen, Susie Dent's word of the week (RT, 20 May), had me laughing. A colleague misheard "Lord of the Dance, said he" as "Lord of the damp settee". Our daughter insisted "All creatures great and small" was "All green shirts great and small". And in Abba's Super Trouper, the line "When I called you last night from Glasgow" sounds like "When I called you last night from Tesco".

Ian Taylor Merseyside

sharing. Could we also express praise for Radio 3 Breakfast's entertaining take on Eurovision (12 May), featuring a piece of music from each of the countries in the final. In our opinion, none of the composers featured deserved "nul points" and they're all worth revisiting in the future, especially those who were new to us.

As the choice of music couldn't be known until the full list of finalists was announced the evening before, it involved working through the night.

Congratulations to producer Susan Kenyon, host Petroc Trelawny and the whole production team for their hard work and dedication.

... OR NUL?

Whoever thought it was a good idea to have BBC's Mel Giedroyc commentating over the results and, even worse, the run-through of all the entries? I found it maddening and intrusive.

MIGHTY RIVER

I'm not sure where it's going, but the Australian series Savage River (5Star/My5) is highly watchable. Any series with Nadine Garner (I will never forget her Arlene Toomer in Boys from the Bush) and Jacqueline McKenzie is a must-watch for me.

Philip Brannon
London SE25

LET IT RAIN

I have very much enjoyed the bleak but strangely uplifting series Rain Dogs (BBC1). The central characters showed such courage, resilience and empathy, despite having to constantly battle their own demons and the aftermath from their dysfunctional families.

I'm sure many women, and certainly all single parents, would be able to relate to the hard choices facing Costello Jones (Daisy May Cooper) to secure the survival of herself and her child. Often less is more, but it would be good to know how life pans out for them all.

Maggie Perry
Gateshead, Tyne and Wear
No news yet on any second series, but all eight episodes are available on iPlayer.

BETTER ALTERNATIVE?

Having the "BBC digital on-screen graphic" lurking in the top left corner when viewing programmes on iPlayer may be an irritant (Feedback, 20 May), but it's a small price to pay when you're allowed to read a programme's end credits without being aurally assailed by continuity announcers.

ART OF THE VOICE

'My dad said I'd have to lose my Devon accent'

How wonderful to see the piece on Ben Crowe in the Easter edition of RT. It's a great idea to celebrate our brilliant and best voice actors.

Sue Ward, Durham

Among the radio talents Sue suggests Feedback showcases next is actor Jonathan Keeble, who has appeared in more than 800 BBC radio plays – everything from Shakespeare to Sherlock Holmes to Doctor Who. "My first radio," he tells RT, "was in 1994, playing both a minstrel called Roberto and Elvis Presley in Doctor Who: the Ghosts of N-Space [broadcast in six parts in 1996], which was Jon Pertwee's final appearance as the Doctor. Auditioning was great fun – it was me and 20 Elvis impersonators!"

Keeble grew up in Torquay and started acting when he was in his teens. "My father was a singer and my mother a dancer so it wasn't a huge leap for me, but when I told my dad I wanted to act, he said I'd have to lose my Devonian accent. So he sat me down in front of the telly and got me to repeat the news

AUDIO STAR
Jonathan Keeble has also recorded numerous audiobooks and voices computer games as read by Kenneth Kendall and Richard Baker, in their voices. So I owe it all to them!"

His first professional job was playing Hamlet in Exeter and he continued to work in theatre until 1993, when, he says, "I auditioned for the BBC Radio Drama Company, Broadcasting House opened its welcoming doors and I gladly walked in.

"I've had so many wonderful roles – some of my favourites were in Bomber, a memorable adaptation of Len Deighton's book; several Sherlock Holmes stories, with the great Clive Merrison and Michael Williams as Holmes and Watson; Henry IV Part I, in which I played Hotspur; and a fabulous comedy called Higher that ran for four series. I played Jim, a venal Dean at a second-rate university.

"I was also in The Archers for a year, playing the evil Owen King who raped Kathy Perks after the panto rehearsal. Quite a Christmas storyline that was.

"I'm currently a returning character in the Radio 4 comedy drama series Trust about a school academy in Salford [available on BBC Sounds] and I'm about to record a new radio play by Nicholas McInerney called A Ghastly Mistake – except it won't be, because I love working in radio. You don't have to look your best or learn the lines, and the people are lovely."

TRUE TREASURE

Thank you, BBC, for the invitation to celebrate Victoria Wood in the week of what would have been her 70th birthday. BBC4 gave us a whole evening (17 May) of her pure genius. I loved it.

IT'S ONLY ROCK 'N' ROLL...

While never a particular fan of the Rolling Stones, I found Nick Broomfield's perceptive and well-constructed documentary The Stones and Brian Jones (15 May BBC2) interesting and moving. It stirred many memories of those crazy times and, as a contemporary of Brian Jones at Cheltenham Grammar School, I was intrigued by the grainy footage of the school orchestra and the playground.

JENNY ECLAIR

The comedian on being marginalised, patronised – and not giving a damn

What is the view from your sofa?

I sit in a black bouclé woollen chair. I'm so fond of this chair that it has to be re-covered about every four years, because my arse wears through the fabric. I can see my television and the sofa, which is a cream leather number that I don't find particularly comfortable.

What have you been watching on TV?

I'm really enjoying Glow Up: Britain's Next Make-Up Star, although I prefer to see make-up being used rather than bits of toilet roll, plastic bottles and ping-pong balls. I love The Big Interiors Battle hosted by AJ Odudu. I don't know what's going on with Channel 4's publicity department, because they've not flogged this. Any interior design show, I'm there.

You live with your husband, designer Geof Powell. Who controls the remote in your house?

My niece has been living with us for her first year at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art. She occasionally watches some telly with us and looks a bit bewildered by our choices. Geof can watch any old st up to nine o'clock and then I have the nine till ten slot.

In Taskmaster, you're competing with comedians Frankie Boyle, Mae Martin, Kiell Smith-Bynoe and Ivo Graham. How would you describe your approach?

Everyone else plotted and schemed and gave more thought to each task than I did – I just went bouldering in, crashing about doing ridiculous things, before begging to do it again because I did so badly. I don't have a working left hand and I moaned about it all the time. None of that has made it into the TV edit, which I'm furious about, because it's my only excuse for not being able to do things.

You've been waiting to be a contestant on Taskmaster for a long time. Are there any other shows that have never given you a call?

Oh God, yeah, it's embarrassing. The Taskmaster club is one I've wanted to join for a very long time. I've not been asked to do Have I Got News for You, Eight Out of Ten Cats or Would I Lie to You? It's quite a long list, but I've done a lot of reality shows, so it's swings and roundabouts.

Why do you think you weren't asked?

I'm underestimated and patronised. I've been patronised all my fing career, I'll tell you that for nothing. I was looking through some old photos, and reviews of stand-up shows from 15 years ago fell out. They were by male critics and were thinly disguised as "I can't stand her, but you've got to take your hat off to her". It shocked me how people were allowed to get away with that – it would get called out now. I wrote Wendy: the Bumper Book of Fun for Women of a Certain Age with Judith Holder, and one review said it was a lot more amusing than it needed to be. Looking back at things that were written, I can see this barely veiled contempt for me and my work.

How do you think comedy has changed throughout your career?

SNACK OF CHOICE

Geof and I eat in front of the TV at 8.30pm with a plate of food that's been assembled rather than cooked.

FIRST TV MEMORY

Sitting with my mother aged three or four – I remember Flower Pot Men, Andy Pandey and The Woodentops.

long time. The culture of comedy that I grew up with was so competitive because there was so little room at the top. If one person got on telly, you were made to feel that the door was closed to you. It was quite toxic. Now there's room for many types of comedy and that's healthy – it makes for a better experience for audiences. In the past, if you couldn't survive the heckling, you couldn't survive the comedy scene. The gentler, more interesting comics often got swamped and disappeared. It's a shame because there were some fabulous people that just couldn't get heard above the noise.

Taskmaster involves making yourself look ridiculous at times – how did you feel about that?

I don't really have any shame. My last drop of shame was on The Weakest Link when I couldn't recognise Germany on a map. I felt utterly humiliated. I haven't felt shame since and I don't think I ever will again. I've got no more sts to give.
